Franco Calls On Britain To Return Gibraltar

Declares Spain's Duty Is to Regain Rock and Create African Empire

Isabella's Command

By the Associated Press

Madrid, July 17.—Gen. Franco, Spain's chief of state, served notice on Britain tonight that Spain expects to get Gibraltar back.

Speaking at the old royal palace to military, naval and airforce officers, Franco declared it was the "duty and mission" of his regime to realize the testament of Queen Isabella—to make Gibraltar again Spanish, to expand in Africa and to conserve the national unity.

Falangists' Cause Pleased

It was Franco's first official indorsement of the recent student and Falangist (Spanish Fascist) campaign for return of the rock.

"Spain," he said, "has 500,000 heroes who lost their lives in fighting for the nation's unity and 2,000,000 soldiers ready to face anyone and to support Spain's rights."

Franco spoke of the Spanish unity achieved by Ferdinand and Isabella and declared:

"From that initial period this duty and mission has been left us as a people: The command to hold Gibraltar, African expansion and maintenance of unity: The command of Isabella's will which, after four centuries, is still in force and binds us."

British Since 1704

(Gibraltar was annexed to the Spanish crown in 1502, after the Moors had lost it. In 1704, it was captured by a combined force of Dutch and British, and the Prince of Hesse-Darmstadt, fighting for the Archduke Charles of Austria. The Spaniards besieged Gibraltar, without success, for three years and seven months—from 1779 to 1783.)

Along with summaries of Franco's speech, Madrid afternoon newspapers published a dispatch from Milan, Italy, quoting the British governor of Gibraltar as telling persons ordered to leave the stronghold that:

"Sooner or later we'll all have to go."

Soviet Army Seizes More Of Rumania

Threatens to Go On If Nation Leaves Balkan Entente

By International News Service

Bucharest, July 17. — Marching beyond the territory recently ceded by Rumania, Soviet troops tonight invaded the Pomarna and Dorohoi districts of Bukovina, and occupied 12 villages, it was learned here.

Russian commanders, according to reports, said they would occupy more territory west of the Pruth River if Rumania quits the Balkan bloc. Rumanian troops withdrew before the Russian advance without offering any resistance.

[A Russian gunboat standing guard at the mouth of the north branch of the Danube River Thursday fired a salvo of 15-pound shells across the bow of a German river steamer en route to the Black Sea, a United Press dispatch from Galati, Rumania, reported.]

The movement of Russian troops threatened to cause new friction between Germany and the U. S. S. R. since the Reich supports Rumania's plan to quit the Balkan Entente of Rumania, Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey.

German-language newspapers in Bucharest tonight said Rumania is about to resign from the Balkan bloc and denounce her military agreement with Turkey.

(A dispatch from Budapest said the power station at Galati, Rumanian city of 100,00 on the Danube River, was blown up tonight and five persons were killed. Sabotage was believed responsible for the blast.

Glass Names Farley, Hits Third Term

Assails Intolerance As He Nominates A Democrat Who 'Keeps His Word'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, July 17.—Senator Carter Glass was an angry, unforgettable figure on this historic night.

The 82-year-old Virginian nominated for the Presidency his good friend, Postmaster General James A. Farley.

In doing so, the hoarse-voiced fiery statesman faced a hostile Democratic National Convention and denounced that which was about to be done—the scrapping of the third-term tradition that was founded by Thomas Jefferson.

The result was the most uproarious scene of the convention. Boos and cheers swept the great stadium. And Glass, unable to proceed, stood on the rostrum waiting, his chin jutting defiantly, fire in his eyes.

The boos, it was noted, came mostly from the floor, where were gathered an army of delegates eager to nominate Roosevelt and get it over with, a gathering resentful of talk about Jefferson and his third-term warning.

The Galleries Cheer

The cheers, it was noted came from the galleries—ominous signs in the eyes of some on lookers.

Farley's undoubted approval of the Virginia Senator's angry statement against a third term, and his acquiescence in its delivery revealed to the convention how completely has been the break between the President and his Postmaster General and long-time political manager.

Senator Glass stirred up a second tumultuous scene when he told the convention that while sitting on the platform he had received two anonymous notes objecting to Farley because he was a Catholic.

"One of the three achievements of Thomas Jefferson he most treasured," said Glass angrily, "was the Virginia statute of religious freedom."

"Boo!" The great stadium resounded with this hostile expression made famous by the Bronx. But again there were cheers, and again they came mostly from the galleries.

Recalls Loyalty

When Senator Glass advanced to the rostrum tonight to nominate Farley, he was given an ovation due an elder statesman. Chairman Barkley introduced him as one of the outstanding statesmen in America's history, and one of the "youngest men in the United States Senate." The band whooped it up with "Ole' Virginny," and Glass smiled his crooked smile and prepared to cut loose.

In a croaking voice that could be hardly heard at first, the famous Virginian told how he had arisen from a sick bed to come here and

Isolationist Platform Is Adopted

Bars A. E. F. Unless U. S. Is Attacked; Anti-Third Term Resolution Booed

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, July 17.—A platform pledging limited aid to "peace-loving peoples" and nonparticipation "in foreign wars" was adopted by the Democratic Convention here tonight after an antithird-term plank had been turned down by overwhelming vote.

Hailed as a victory by the isolationist bloc, the document goes much further in their direction on its bitterly-disputed foreign affairs plank than the Republican platform, for it specifically promises that "we will not send our army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside of the Americas, except in case of attack."

The antithird-term amendment was offered from the floor by Representative Ryan, of Minnesota, leader of a small group of delegates apparently determined to fight President Roosevelt's renomination to the last ditch.

Antithird Termers Booed

A convention official had hardly begun to read the proposal, reaffirming the party's antithird-term position in 1896, when his voice was drowned out in a rising chorus of boos swelling throughout the enormous hall.

When Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, permanent chairman, put the vote, the "ayes" seemed feeble indeed compared to the deafening shout of "no," and when, immediately afterward, Barkley asked the vote on adoption of the platform, the few negatives seemed principally to come from the gallery.

The band played "Happy Days Are Here Again," and delegates with cowbells and other noise-making gadgets helped to swell the din.

Willkie 'Gratified,' Accepts 'Challenge Of the New Deal'

Central City, Colo., July 17 (INS) Wendell L. Wilkie tonight accepted the challenge of the New Deal in a statement in which he expressed "gratification" at the renomination of President Roosevelt for a third term.

"I am greated gratified," Wilkie said. "It ought to be a great campaign."

"We will have presented to the voters of the country, the issues, which have been created by the New Deal, advocated for the New Deal by the author and ablest of that philosophy and the directing force of the New Deal practices.

"In addition—the American voters will have their first opportunity to pass upon the question of a third term.

"The issues are fundamental and important which the people must and should determine. I hope I may be able to do my part in their adequate presentation."

District Suffrage Plank in Platform

Chicago, Ill., July 17.—A plank favoring suffrage for the District of Columbia was included in the platform adopted by the Democratic Party tonight.

Malcolm McConihe, chairman of the District delegation, said this was the first time the Democratic Party ever pledged itself to District suffrage.

The plank reads:

(See the Editorial, "Perhaps a Half Loaf," On Page 10.)

Highlights of Democratic Party's Isolationist Platform

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Key sections of the Democratic platform:

WE WILL NOT PARTICIPATE IN FOREIGN WARS, and we will not send our Army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside of the Americas, except in case of attack. We favor and shall rigorously enforce and defend the Monroe Doctrine.

WE PROPOSE TO PROVIDE AMERICA with an invincible air force, a navy strong enough to protect all our seacoasts and our national interest, and a fully equipped and mechanized army.

WE PLEDGE TO EXTEND TO THESE (peace-loving and liberty-loving peoples wantonly attacked by ruthless aggressors) all the material aid at our command, consistent with law and not inconsistent with the interests of our own national self-defense . . .

SINCE WE ASSUMED OFFICE, NINE MILLION additional persons have gained regular employment . . .

THE NOMINATION OF AN UTILITY EXECUTIVE by the Republican Party as its Presidential candidate raises squarely the issue, whether the Nation's water power shall be used for all the people or for the selfish interests of a few. We accept the issue.

WE PLEDGE OURSELVES TO MAKE PARITY as well as soil conservation payments until such time as the goal of parity income for agriculture is realized.

WE PLEDGE TO MAKE THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT increasingly effective, by covering millions of persons not now protected under its terms . . .

WE PLEDGE TO CONTINUE TO ENFORCE FAIR labor standards . . .

WE SHALL CONTINUE TO RECOGNIZE the obligation of government to provide work for deserving workers who cannot be absorbed by private industry.

Democrats Make History With Noise

Windy City Hears Raucous Swan Song Of a Tradition

By Hedley Donovan.
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, July 17.—History was turned out here tonight under a hot bluish-white light, beating down on a noisy gun-jumping Democratic Convention. The searchlights cut across the restless ranks of delegates and flooded the lower tiers of the galleries—packed with a crowd of 20,000, impatient for the promised climax.

When the climax came at 1:30 a. m., with Postmaster General Farley's dramatic motion to nominate President Roosevelt by acclamation, the crowd responded with a shattering volley of cheers. It was the shortest, loudest and most spontaneous of the half dozen "demonstrations" during this twenty-eighth national convention of the Democratic Party.

The machinery which was warmed up twice last night for draft-Roosevelt demonstrations was turned on full blast after nomination of the President by Senator Hill, of Alabama.

There was a surge of State chairmen and standards into the aisles as the stadium organ struck up "Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones." The Iowa delegation marched under a

Roosevelt's Reply to Wait On Notification

Formal Message From Convention Is Expected Today

President Roosevelt will have nothing to say on his tradition-smashing third term nomination until he receives the ocial notification from the convention, the White House said early today.

The notification, it was added, is expected this morning.

"It is the customary procedure and one that he would like to follow," Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early told reporters who had waited at the White House offices for six hours for the President's reaction.

There had been reports that Mr. Roosevelt would address the convention by radio or telephone hookup tonight but Early said he was not able to confirm them.

Radio and telephone company representatives stood by last night to provide facilities to carry the President's voice to the convention hall and perhaps simultaneously to the country if he decided to speak.

Broadcasting and telephone officials made their hurried preparations beforehand on the theory that if the President was named for a third term he would still have to expand on his Tuesday night message by giving a "yes or no" answer to the nomination.

Such a procedure for accepting or

Army, du Pont Sign Contract To Treble Powder Production

The Army acted yesterday to treble the Nation's capacity for manufacturing smokeless powder, as defense chiefs reported great strides in equipping the armed forces with modern weapons.

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson announced that a contract had been signed with the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co., for the construction of a $25,000,000 powder plant at Charlestown, Ind. It will have a production capacity of 200,000 pounds a day. The present national capacity is less than 30,000,000 pounds a year.

At the same time, Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, said that by January 1 the Army would have 16 divisions in active service completely equipped with modern fighting equipment.

Navy Secretary Knox likewise reported progress in modernizing defense equipment to meet present conditions, revealing that additional antiaircraft protection has been or is now being installed on 53 fighting ships of the fleet. The equipment, which includes antiaircraft guns and shell splinter shields, is being added to warships as fast as navy yards space becomes available, he said.

Marshall also disclosed War Department plans to set up eight more tank divisions as soon as equipment becomes available. He said the present armament program calls for a 2,000,000-man force, including replacements, organized into 45 infantry and 10 armored divisions.

The new powder plant, 12 miles from Louisville, Ky. will be owned by the Government, but will be constructed and operated by the du

Choice Made Unanimous After Motion by Farley; Acceptance Is Expected In Radio Speech Tonight

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Chicago (Thursday), July 18.—President Roosevelt this morning shattered a century and a half of American political precedent by receiving the Democratic nomination for a third term as President.

The man who has kept the world guessing for two years, and still hasn't said "Yes," received 946 13-30 first-ballot votes to run away with the nomination. Then the convention made it unanimous.

Three other candidates who had entered the race against him, knowing well they faced overwhelming defeat, received only a scattered minority.

Vice President Garner—61.

Postmaster General Farley—72 17-30.

Senator Tydings, of Maryland—9½.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull received 5 2-3 votes from Virginia, although his name was not placed in nomination.

Both here and in Washington there was general expectation that Mr. Roosevelt would address the convention by radio tonight and accept the honor. The White House announced, however, that he would await the official notification before completing his plans.

Delegates who had stayed deep into the morning to "draft" for another four years the man who denied to the end he was a candidate, wandered sleepily home after one last hoarse-voiced demonstration for the one of their choice.

Delegates Take Acceptance for Granted

They took it for granted that the President would accept and match this November his famed popularity against Wendell L. Willkie, the man who wanted to "meet the champ."

Only one State, Texas, and two territories, Alaska and the Canal Zone, gave the President no votes. Texas was for Garner and the two territories for Farley.

At the conclusion of the balloting, House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn withdrew Texas' 46 votes for Garner and cast them for Roosevelt.

Amid a wild demonstration, Postmaster General Farley was next recognized. Never had delegates cheered more heartily than when Farley mounted the rostrum, from which he opened this convention last Monday noon.

The party's national chairman thanked delegates for party honors conferred upon him. He said he had a brief message.

Farley Explains His Stand on Third Term

He moved to suspend the rules and declare President Roosevelt the candidate by acclamation.

Farley said:

"You have given me on two occasions the highest honor within your gift, the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee. I ask you now for a further courtesy, I ask your indulgence so that I may deliver without interruption a brief message to this great convention.

"I have pursued a course here that has been dictated by the deepest conviction and when a man fails to follow his sincere conviction no matter how unpleasant the consequences he is false to himself, false to his party and false to his country.

"I wanted this convention to proceed as Democrats should proceed to nominate the standard bearers in keeping with the highest traditions of our party. That is the only Democratic method and that has been observed.

Thunders Approval of Farley's Motion

"My name has been placed in the nomination for the Presidency by a great and noble American. As long as I live I shall be grateful to Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia."

The convention thundered its approval of Farley's motion, and President Roosevelt at 1:37 a. m. was nominated by acclamation. The Postmaster General made his motion after pledging his support to the nominee.

Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, who had voted for Farley, and Senator Tydings, himself a candidate, joined the move for party unanimity, while Gov. Cooper of Tennessee announced that Secretary of State Cordell Hull never had been a candidate.

Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, third-term floor manager for the President, moved that a committee be named to notify the President "because he may not have heard of it."

A five-man committee, headed by Byrnes, was appointed to

'A Broken Man'

M. L. Annenberg Must Enter Prison Monday for Tax Fraud

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 17.—M. L. Annenberg, who amassed a fortune in publishing, turf news and real estate ventures, learned today that he must enter prison next week to begin a three-year sentence for evading income taxes.

His last hope for clemency vanished when Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson denied his petition for probation and refused his request for a six weeks extension of his stay of execution.

The jurist explained that his action meant that the Philadelphia publisher would have to surrender next Monday to start his trip to a Government penitentiary.

To a reporter who located him in a Gold Coast hotel, Annenberg said: "I am going home to say goodby to my family. I am physically broken. I am going to do the best I can, if I live."

U. S. Marshal William H. McDonnell said that Annenberg would be taken to the Federal prison in Lewisburg, Pa., unless the Department of Justice designates some other institution.

The Prison Bureau in Washington reported that it would not disclose the name of the institution selected because such announcements were contrary to custom, especially in widely publicized cases.

Court house attaches here said he could surrender here, or in Philadelphia or at the prison to which he was assigned if arrangements were made beforehand.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Chicago, July 18.

END OF A CHAPTER

DUNCE CAPS DOFFED: Some time this morning the long-awaited ceremony takes place—the doffing of the dunce caps which FDR assigned to the Washington correspondents who asked him pointed third-term questions during the last 18 months.

Harlan Miller

These never rested very heavily on the reportorial skulls. They were worn with an air, journalistic crowns, invisible but heroic.

Some of them may be mailed directly to the Roosevelt archives at Hyde Park, a light touch which may some day evoke a reminiscent Roosevelt grin.

KISSES FOR THREE: Of the multitude of Vice Presidential candidates, three finally received the Roosevelt kiss: Douglas, Hull and Byrnes, in the order named, for different reasons:

* * * *

Douglas as cherished heir-apparent; Hull to mollify the anti-third-termers who boomed him for President; and Byrnes to placate the conservatives, with whom he is a gifted liaison man. Roosevelt would have liked them combined in one man.

"—dunce caps to the discard"

TOUGHER BROTHER: FDR's young cleanup squad wanted Hull promoted to make way for a Secretary of State, who would make Uncle Sam a tougher big-brother, a more hard-boiled good-neighbor to our somewhat reluctant brother republics to the South.

* * * *

Hull is committed to a gentle, conciliatory policy of negotiation with the 21 Republics. But this policy strikes the kitchen cabinet as too slow now. It gives the Latins time to hang back, wait, see if Hitler wins swiftly, maybe jump on the bandwagon with him.

* * * *

It isn't true, of course, that the Latins are lousy lovers. But diplomatically they tend to philander. Some of the insiders want a new big brother slogan: "Be a good neighbor but carry a big stick."

* * * *

INTRAMURAL WAR: Thoughts while not listening to a speech—It has been clear here, as it was at Philadelphia, that a political party too often regards its opponents as more menacing enemies than any foreign foe. This, alas, has been a trump card for dictators and aggressors.

* * * *

Between political brothers it's an eternal scuffle; an ogre at a distance remains an ogre in a fairy tale until the eleventh hour. To the arrested intelligence of the adult 12-year-old mind, a Willkie or a Roosevelt can be more dreadful than a Stalin or Hitler 4,000 miles away.

"—Roosevelt throws a wreath"

CHICAGO CAVIAR: To judge by some of the crowded expensive dining rooms, what the delegates really came for was to eat $3 table-d'hote dinners . . . Instead of Philadelphia's Valley Forge the ladies are visiting the stores for autumn clothes.

* * * *

Chicago typifies Democratic hurly-burly almost as well as Philadelphia typified GOP conservatism . . . Rank and file Democrats here seem as unaware of their leaders' dislike of Roosevelt as rank and file Republicans at Philadelphia were of their leaders' suspicion of Willkie before he was nominated.

* * * *

PROPHECIES: Political wizards here think the Democrats will give Willkie a 3-or-4-week lull before they begin to massage him; that he will not be disturbed much during his honeymoon; and that the election will be decided in October not so much with words as by the status of national defense.

* * * *

HEIR UNCERTAIN: The brain-trusters didn't quite make the grade with their plan to assure choice of a Vice Presidential nominee who would be F. D. R.'s heir and the executor of his program. Only one of the Douglas-Hull-Byrnes trio fills the bill.

They really wanted Attorney General Jackson; if he could have been built up, there would not have been any third-term drive. But Farley blocked that two and one-half years ago; and he got what he wanted less than Jackson.

* * * *

Incidentally, up to the eleventh hour the New Dealers hadn't abandoned the Jackson idea, even if he does come from FDR's State. They saw a loophole in that technicality. What really stumped them was that the ticket needed a shaggy Westerner, as shaggy as Willkie if possible.

Text of Democratic Party's Platform

Plank Bars A.E.F., Limits Aid to Britain

Ruthless Aggression, Appeasing Dictators Both Denounced

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 17.—The text of the Democratic platform follows:

Preamble:

The world is undergoing violent change. Humanity, uneasy in this machine age, is demanding a sense of security and dignity based on human values.

No democratic government which fails to recognize this trend—and take appropriate action—can survive.

That is why the Government of this Nation has moved to keep ahead of this trend; has moved with speed inexplicable to those who do not see this trend.

Outside Americas, established institutions are being overthrown and democratic philosophies are being repudiated by those whose creed recognizes no power higher than military force, no values other than a false efficiency.

What the founding fathers realized upon this continent was a daring dream, that men could have not only physical security, not only efficiency, but something else in addition that men had never had before—the security of the heart that comes with freedom, the peace of mind that comes from a sense of justice.

Up to This Generation

To this generation of Americans it is given to defend this democratic faith as it is challenged by social maladjustment within and totalitarian greed without. The world revolution against which we prepare our defense is so threatening that not until it has burned itself out in the last corner of the earth will our democracy be able to relax its guard.

In this world crisis, the purpose of the Democratic Party is to defend against external attack and justify by eternal progress the system of government and way of life from which the Democratic Party takes its name.

Toward the modern fulfillment of the American ideal, the Democratic Party, during the last seven years, has labored successfully:

1. To strengthen democracy by defensive preparedness against aggression, whether by open attack or secret infiltration;

2. To strengthen democracy by increasing our economic efficiency, and

3. To strengthen democracy by improving the welfare of the people.

These three objectives are one and inseparable. No nation can be strong by armaments alone. It must possess and use all the necessary resources for producing goods plentifully and distributing them effectively. It must add to these factors of material strength the unconquerable spirit and energy of a contented people, convinced that there are no boundaries to human progress and happiness in a land of liberty.

Our Faith Unshakable

Our faith that these objectives can be attained is made unshakeable by what has already been done by the present Administration—in stopping the waste and exploitation of our human and natural resources, in restoring to the average man and woman a stake in the preservation of our democracy, in enlarging our national armaments, and in achieving national unity.

We Must Strengthen Democracy Against Aggression

We shall hold fast to these gains. We are proud of our record. Therefore the party in convention assembled indorses wholeheartedly the brilliant and courageous leadership of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his statesmanship and that of the Congress for the past seven trying years. And to our President and great leader we send our cordial greetings.

The American people are determined that war, raging in Europe, Asia and Africa, shall not come to America.

We will not participate in foreign wars, and we will not send our Army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside the Americas, except in case of attack. We favor and shall rigorously enforce and defend the Monroe Doctrine.

The direction and aim of our foreign policy has been, and will continue to be, the security and defense of our own land and the maintenance of its peace.

For years our President has warned the Nation that organized assaults against religion, democracy and international good faith threatened our own peace and security. Men blinded by partisanship brushed aside these warnings as warmongering and officious intermeddling. The fall of 12 nations was necessary to bring the belated approval of legislative and executive action that the President had urged and undertaken with the full support of the people. It is a tribute to the President's foresight and action that our defense forces are today at the peak of their peacetime effectiveness.

Seek Invincible Defense

Weakness and unpreparedness invite aggression. We must be so strong that no possible combination of powers would dare to attack us. We propose to provide America with an invincible air force, a navy strong enough to protect all our seacoasts and our national interests, and a fully-equipped and mechanized army. We shall continue to coordinate these implements of defense with the necessary expansion of industrial productive capacity and with the training of appropriate personnel. Outstanding leaders of industry and labor have already been enlisted by the Government to harness our mighty economic forces for national defense.

Experience of other nations give warning that total defense is necessary to repel attack, and that partial defense is no defense.

We have seen the downfall of nations accomplished through internal dissension provoked from without. We denounce and will do all in our power to destroy the treasonable activities of disguised antidemocratic and un-American agencies which would sap our strength, paralyze our will to defend ourselves, and destroy our unity by inciting race against race, class against class, religion against religion, and the people against their free institutions.

Democracy of Sacrifice

To make America strong and to keep America free, every American must give of his talents and treasure in accordance with his ability and his country's needs. We must have democracy of sacrifice as well as democracy of opportunity.

To insure that our armaments shall be implements of peace rather than war, we shall continue our traditional policies of the good neighbor; observe and advocate international respect for the rights of others, and for treaty obligations; cultivate foreign trade through desirable trade agreements; and foster economic collaboration with the republics of the Western Hemisphere.

In self-defense and in good conscience, the world's greatest democracy cannot afford heartlessly or in a spirit of appeasement to ignore the peace-loving and liberty-loving peoples wantonly attacked by ruthless aggressors. We pledge to extend to these peoples all the material aid at our command, consistent with law and not inconsistent with the interests of our own national self-defense—all to the end that peace and international good faith may yet emerge triumphant.

We do not regard the need for preparedness a warrant for infringement upon our civil liberties, but on the contrary we shall continue to protect them, in the keen realization that the vivid contrast between the freedom we enjoy and the dark repression which prevails in the lands where liberty is dead, affords warning and example to our people to confirm their faith in democracy.

We must strengthen democracy by increasing our economic efficiency.

The Land and the Farmer

The Republican Party gives its promises to the farmer and its allegiance to those who exploit him.

Since 1932, farm income has been doubled; 6,000,000 farmers, representing more than 80 per cent of all farm families, have participated in an effective soil conservation program; the farm debt and the interest rate on farm debt have been reduced, and farm foreclosures have been drastically curtailed; rural highways and farm-to-market roads have been vastly improved and extended; the surpluses on the farms have been used to feed the needy; low-cost electricity has been brought to 5,000,000 farm people as a result of the rural electrification program; thousands of impoverished farm families have been rehabilitated; and steps have been taken to stop the alarming growth of farm tenancy, to increase land ownership, and to mitigate the hardships of migratory farm labor.

We pledge ourselves:

To make parity as well as soil conservation payments until such time as the goal of parity income for agriculture is realized.

To extend and enlarge the tenant purchase program until every deserving tenant farmer has a real opportunity to have a farm of his own.

To refinance existing farm debts at lower interest rates and on longer and more flexible terms.

To continue to provide for adjustment of production through democratic processes to the extent that excess surpluses are capable of control.

To Continue Crop Loans

To continue the program of rehabilitation of farmers who need and merit aid.

To preserve and strengthen the ever-normal granary on behalf of the national defense, the consumer at home and abroad, and the American farmer.

To continue to make commodity loans to maintain the ever-normal granary and to prevent destructively low prices.

To expand the domestic consumption of our surpluses by the food and cotton stamp plan, the free school lunch, low-cost milk and other plans for bringing surplus farm commodities to needy consumers.

To continue our substantially increased appropriations for research and extension work through the land-grant colleges, and for research laboratories established to develop new outlets for farm products.

To conserve the soil and water resources for the benefit of farmers and the Nation. In such conservation programs we shall, so far as practicable, bring about that development in forests and other permanent crops as will not unduly expand livestock and dairy production.

REA to Be Expanded

To safeguard the farmer's foreign markets and expand his domestic market for all domestic crops.

To enlarge the rural electrification program.

To encourage farmer owned and controlled cooperatives.

To continue the broad program launched by this Administration for the coordinated development of our river basins through reclamation and irrigation, flood control, reforestation and soil conservation, stream purification, recreation, fish and game protection, low-cost power and rural industry.

To encourage marketing agreements in aid of producers of dairy products, vegetables, fruits and specialty crops for the purpose of orderly marketing and the avoidance of unfair and wasteful practices.

To extend crop insurance from wheat to other crops as rapidly as experience justifies such extension.

Pledge Adequate Financing

To safeguard the family sized farm in all our programs.

To finance these programs adequately in order that they may be effective.

In settling new lands reclaimed from desert by projects like Grand Coulee, we shall give priority to homeless families who have lost their farms. As these new lands are brought into use we shall continue, by Federal purchase, to retire from the plow submarginal lands so that an increased percentage of our farmers may be able to live and work on good land.

These programs will continue to be in the hands of locally elected farmer committees to the largest extent possible. In this truly democratic way we will continue to bring economic security to the farmer and his family, while recognizing the dignity and freedom of American farm life.

Industry and the Worker

Under Democratic auspices, more has been done in the last seven years to foster the essential freedom, dignity and opportunity of the American worker than in any other Administration in the Nation's history. In consequence, labor is today taking its rightful place as a partner of management in the common cause of higher earnings, industrial efficiency, national unity and national defense.

A far-flung system of employment exchanges has brought together millions of idle workers and available jobs. The workers' right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing is being enforced. We have enlarged the Federal machinery for the mediation of labor disputes. We have enacted an effective wage and hour law. Child labor in factories has been outlawed. Prevailing wages to workers employed on Government contracts have been assured.

We pledge to continue to enforce fail labor standards; to maintain the principles of the National Labor Relations Act; to expand employment training and opportunity for our youth, older workers, and workers displaced by technological changes; to strengthen the orderly processes of collective bargaining and peaceful settlement of labor disputes, and to work always for a just distribution of our national income among those who labor.

We will continue our efforts to achieve equality of opportunity for men and women without impairing the social legislation which which promotes true equality by safeguarding the health, safety and economic welfare of women workers. The right to work for compensation in both public and private employment is an inalienable privilege of women, as well as men, without distinction as to marital status.

The production of coal is one of our most important basic industries. Stability of production, employment, distribution and price are indispensable to the public welfare. We pledge continuation of the Federal Bituminous Coal Stabilization Act, and sympathetic consideration of the application of similar legislation to the anthracite coal industry, in order to provide additional protection for the owners, miners and consumers of hard coal.

We shall continue to emphasize the human element in industry and strive toward increasingly wholehearted cooperation between labor and industrial management.

Capital and the Business Man

To make democracy strong our system of business enterprise and individual initiative must be free to gear its tremendous productive capacity to serve the greatest good of the greatest number.

We have defended and will continue to defend all legitimate business.

We have attacked and will continue to attack unbridled concentration of economic power and the exploitation of the consumer and the investor.

We have attacked the kind of banking which treated America as a colonial empire to exploit; the kind of securities business which regarded the stock exchange as a private gambling club for wagering other people's money; the kind of public utility holding companies which used consumers' and investors' money to suborn a free press, bludgeon legislatures and political conventions and control elections against the interest of their customers and their security holders.

We have attacked the kind of business which levied tribute on all the rest of American business by the extortionate methods of monopoly.

We did not stop with attack—we followed through with the remedy. The American people found in themselves, through the democratic process, ability to meet the economic problems of average American business where concentrated power had failed.

Restored Banking System

We found a broken and prostrate banking and financial system. We restored it to health by strengthening banks, insurance companies and other financial institutions. We have insured 62,000,000 bank accounts, and protected millions of small investors in the security and commodity markets. We have thus revived confidence, safeguarded thrift and opened the road to all honorable business.

We have made credit at low interest rates available to small businessmen, thus unfastening the oppressive yoke of a money monopoly, and giving the ordinary citizen a chance to go into business and stay in business.

We recognize the importance of small business concerns and new enterprises in our national economy, and favor the enactment of constructive legislation to safeguard the welfare of small business. Independent small-scale enterprise,no no less than big business, and its interests should be examined and fostered by a continuous research program.

We have provided an important outlet for private capital by stimulating home building and low-rent projects. More new homes were built throughout the Nation last year than in any year since 1929.

and the world's finest system of civil aeronautics, to promote our commerce and our national defense.

We have steered a steady course between a bankruptcy-producing deflation and a thrift-destroying inflation, so that today the dollar is the most stable and sought-after currency in the world—a factor of immeasurable benefit in our foreign and domestic commerce.

We shall continue to oppose barriers which impede trade among the several States. We pledge our best efforts in strengthening our home markets, and to this end we favor the adjustment of freight rates so that no section or State will have undue advantage over any other.

To encourage investment in productive enterprise, the tax-exempt privileges of future Federal, State and local bonds should be removed.

We have enforced the antitrust laws more vigorously than at any time in our history, thus affording the maximum protection to the competitive system.

Favor Insurance Supervision

We favor strict supervision of all forms of the insurance business by the several States for the protection of policyholders and the public.

The full force of our policies, by raising the national income by $30,000,000,000 from low of 1932, by encouraging vast reemployment and by elevating the level of consumer demand, has quickened the flow of buying and selling through every artery of industry and trade.

With mass purchasing power restored and many abuses eliminated, American business stands at the threshhold of a great new era, richer in promise than any we have witnessed—an era of pioneering and progress beyond the present frontiers of economic activity—in transportation, in housing, in industrial expansion and in the new utilization of the products of the farm and the factory.

We shall aid business in redeeming America's promise.

Electric Power

During the last seven years the Democratic Party has won the first major victories for the people of the Nation in their generation-old contest with the power monopoly.

These victories have resulted in the recognition of certain self-evident principles and the realization of vast benefits by the people. These principles, long opposed by the Republican Party, are:

That the power of falling water is a gift from God, and consequently belongs not to a privileged few, but to all the people, who are entitled to enjoy its benefits;

That the people have the right through their Government to develop their own power sites and bring low-cost electricity to their homes, farms and factories.

That public utility holding companies must not be permitted to serve as the means by which a few men can pyramid stocks upon stocks for the sole purpose of controlling vast power empires.

We condemn the Republican policies which permitted the victimizing of investors in the securities of private power corporations and the exploitation of the people by unnecessarily high utility costs.

We condemn the opposition of utility power interests which delayed for years the development of national defense projects in the Tennessee Valley, and which obstructed river basin improvements and other public projects bringing low-cost electric power to the people. The successful power developments in the Tennessee and Columbia river basins show the wisdom of the Democratic Party in establishing Government-owned and operated hydroelectric plants in the interests of power and light consumers.

Whole Regions Revived

Through these Democratic victories whole regions have been revived and restored to prosperous habitation. Production costs have been reduced. Industries have been established which employ men and capital. Cheaper electricity has brought vast economic benefits to thousands of homes and communities.

These victories of the people must be safeguarded. They will be turned to defeat if the Republican Party should be returned to power. We pledge our party militantly to oppose every effort to encroach upon the inherent right of our people to be provided with this primary essential of life at the lowest possible cost.

The nomination of an utility executive by the Republican Party as its Presidential candidate raises squarely the issue, whether the Nation's water power shall be used for all the people or for the selfish interests of a few. We accept this issue.

Stampede For Roosevelt Touched Off

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THEY WANT ROOSEVELT—Delegates and placards jammed the aisles in the Chicago Stadium last night following the placing of President Roosevelt in nomination for a third term by Senator Hill, of Alabama

Development of Western Resources

We take satisfaction in pointing out the incomparable development of the public land States under the wise and constructive legislation of this Administration. Mining has been revived, agriculture fostered, reclamation extended and natural resources developed as never before in a similar period. We pledge the continuance of such policies, based primarily on the expansion of opportunity for the people, as will encourage the full development, free from financial exploitation, of the great resources—mineral, agricultural, livestock, fishing and lumber—which the West affords.

Radio

Radio has become an integral part of the democratically accepted doctrine of freedom of speech, press, assembly and religion. We urge such legislative steps as may be required to afford the same protection from censorship that is now afforded the press under the Constitution of the United States.

We must strengthen democracy by improving the welfare of the people. We place human resources first among the assets of a democratic society.

Unemployment

The Democratic Party wages war on unemployment, one of the gravest problems of our times, inherited at its worst from the last Republican Administration. Since we assumed office 9,000,000 additional persons have gained regular employment in normal private enterprise. All our policies—financial, industrial and agricultural—will continue to accelerate the rate of this progress.

By public action, where necessary to supplement private employment, we have rescued millions from idleness that breeds weakness, and given them a real stake in their countrys' well-being. We shall continue to recognize the obligation of Government to provide work for deserving workers who cannot be absorbed by private industry.

We are opposed to vesting in the States and local authorities the control of Federally-financed work relief. We believe that this Republican proposal is a thinly disguised plan to put the unemployed back on the dole.

We will continue energetically to direct our efforts toward the employment in private industry of all those willing to work, as well as the fullest employment of money and machines. This we pledge as our primary objective.

To further implement this objective, we favor calling, under the direction of the President, a national unemployment conference of leaders of Government, industry, labor and farm groups. There is work in our factories, mines, fields, forests and river basins, on our coasts, highways, railroads and inland waterways. There are houses to be built to shelter our people. Building a better America means work and a higher standard of living for every family, and a richer and more secure heritage for every American.

Social Security

The Democratic Party, which established social security for the Nation, is dedicated to its extension. We pledge to make the Social Security Act increasingly effective, by covering millions of persons not now protected under its terms; by strengthening our unemployment insurance system and establishing more adequate and uniform benefits, through the Federal equalization fund principle; by progressively extending and increasing the benefits of the old-age and survivors insurance system, including protection of the permanently disabled; and by the early realization of a minimum pension for all who have reached the age of retirement and are not gainfully employed.

Health

Good health for all the people is a prime requisite of national preparedness in its broadest sense. We have advanced public health, industrial hygiene, and maternal and child care. We are coordinating the health functions of the Federal Government. We pledge to expand these efforts, and to provide more hospitals and health centers and better health protection wherever the need exists, in rural and urban areas, all through the cooperative efforts of the Federal, State and local governments, the medical, dental, nursing and other scientific professions, and the voluntary agencies.

Youth and Education

Today, when the youth of other lands is being sacrificed in war, this Nation recognizes the full value of the sound youth program established by the Administration. The National Youth Administration and Civilian Conservation Corps have enabled our youths to complete their education, have maintained their health, trained them for useful citizenship and aided them to secure employment.

Our public works have modernized and greatly expanded the Nation's schools. We have increased Federal aid for vocational education and rehabilitation, and undertaken a comprehensive program of defense-industry training. We shall continue to bring to millions of children, youths and adults, the educational and economic opportunities otherwise beyond their reach.

Slum-Clearance and Low-Rent Housing

We have launched a soundly conceived plan of loans and contributions to rid America of overcrowded slum dwellings that breed disease and crime, and to replace them by low-cost housing projects within the means of low-income families. We will extend and accelerate this plan not only in the congested city districts but also in the small towns and farm areas, and we will make it a powerful arm of national defense by supplying housing for the families of enlisted personnel and for workers in areas where industry is expanding to meet defense needs.

Consumers

We are taking effective steps to insure that, in this period of stress, the cost of living shall not be increased by speculation and unjustified price rises.

Negroes

Our Negro citizens have participated actively in the economic and social advances launched by this Administration, including fair labor standards, social security benefits, health protection, work relief projects, decent housing, aid to education, and the rehabilitation of low-income farm families. We have aided more than half a million Negro youths in vocational training, education and employment. We shall continue to strive for complete legislative safeguards against discrimination in government service and benefits, and in the national defense forces. We pledge to uphold due process and the equal protection of the laws for every citizen, regardless of race, creed or color.

Veterans

We pledge to continue our policy of fair treatment of America's war veterans and their dependents, in just tribute to their sacrifices and their devotion to the cause of liberty.

Indians

We favor and pledge the enactment of legislation creating an Indian claims commission for the special purpose of entertaining and investigating claims presented by Indian groups, bands and tribes, in order that our Indian citizens may have their claims against the Government considered, adjusted, and finally settled at the earliest possible date.

Civil Service

We pledge the immediate extension of a genuine system of merit to all positions in the executive branch of the Federal Government except actual bona fide policy-making positions. The competitive method of selecting employes shall be improved until experience and qualification shall be the sole test in determining fitness for employment in the Federal service. Promotion and tenure in Federal service shall likewise depend upon fitness, experience and qualification. Arbitrary and unreasonable rules as to academic training shall be abolished, all to the end that a genuine system of efficiency and merit shall prevail throughout the entire Federal service.

Territories and District of Columbia

We favor a larger measure of self-government leading to Statehood for Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. We favor the appointment of residents to office and equal treatment of the citizens of each of these three Territories. We favor the prompt determination and payment of any just claims by Indians and Eskimo citizens of Alaska against the United States.

We also favor the extension of the right of suffrage to the people of the District of Columbia.

We pledge to continue to stand guard on our true first line of defense—the security and welfare of the men, women and children of America.

The Democratic Faith

Democracy is more than a political system for the government of a people. It is the expression of a people's faith in themselves as human beings. If this faith is permitted to die, human progress will die with it. We believe that a mechanized existence, lacking the spiritual quality of democracy, is intolerable to the free people of this country.

We therefore pledge ourselves to fight, as our fathers fought, for the right of every American to enjoy freedom of religion, speech, press, assembly, petition and security in his home.

It is America's destiny, in these days of rampant despotism, to be the guardian of the world heritage of liberty and to hold aloft and aflame the torch of western civilization.

The Democratic Party rededicates itself to this faith in democracy, to the defense of the American system of government, the only system under which men are masters of their own souls, the only system under which the American people, composed of many races and creeds, can live and work, play and worship in peace, security and freedom.

Firmly relying upon a continuation of the blessings of Divine Providence upon all our righteous endeavors to preserve forever the priceless heritage of American liberty and peace, we appeal to all the liberal-minded men and women of the Nation to approve this platform and to go forward with us by wholeheartedly supporting the candidates who subscribe to the principles which it proclaims.

Willkie to Answer 'Smear' in Kind

Hopes Campaign Will Be Clean, but Plans To 'Take Care of Self'

By the Associated Press

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 17.—Wendell L. Willkie said today that he wanted to conduct his Presidential campaign on major issues but that he and his followers would take care of themselves "if the opposition decides to reduce it to a smear campaign."

Willkie made his statement at a press conference before flying to Denver to accompany Governor Ralph L. Carr to Central City to witness that mining camp's festival performance of the comic opera, "The Bartered Bride."

The nominee and Mrs. Willkie drove with Governor Carr to Central City, 45 miles west of Denver.

Willkie first asked that his campaign tactics statement be kept off the record, but consented later to a request that it be made available for publication.

"I am hoping," Willkie said, "that the campaign will be conducted solely on the issues. If, however, the opposition decides to reduce it to a smear campaign—by discussing wholly extraneous matters from the very fundamental and important issues—we will do our best to take care of ourselves."

"In all my public discussions, I have never made an unkind reference to any individual. I am hoping this campaign to follow the same course."

U. S. Acts to Treble Powder Output

Ponts on a fixed fee basis. Construction, which will begin immediately, will take ten months.

Several additional powder plants are planned under the defense program, all to be located between the Alleghenies and Rockies. War-time needs would require an output of 1,000,000,000 pounds of smokeless powder a year, the capacity reached at the end of the World War.

Stimson Urges Training

Other defense developments of the day were:

Secretary of War Stimson, addressing preparedness advocates from 42 States, gathered at the War Department, said there was a "very dark outlook" for national defense if military service is not made compulsory.

Gen. Marshall said the War Department favored using pressure on employers, if necessary, to assure that men called into military service be given their jobs back when they complete their training period. In mobilizing the National Guard or drafting men under selective service, taking men with dependents will be avoided as far as it is possible, he stated.

Works Progress Administrator Harrington announced President Roosevelt's approval of $17,000,000 in new WPA projects at Army and Navy posts throughout the country, including a total of $868,103 for those in or close to the District.

Arthur B. Purvis, chief of the British purchasing mission, said the delivery of American-built warplanes to Britain had been increased to six or seven a day, and that deliveries should reach 14 a day by December.

Secretary Stimson's indorsement of compulsory military training was made before representatives of the Citizens Military Training Camps Association and his various civilian state aides, meeting here. The group recorded their support of the Burke-Wadsworth selective service bill, and urged that the War Department provide facilities for military training from 20,000 to 30,000 business and professional men in September. About 3,000 are now in training.

Modern fighting equipment is now on hand for the present six Regular Army infantry divisions, two armored divisions and the cavalry division, the War Department revealed. By the end of the year, there will be up-to-date arms for three new regular infantry divisions now being organized, plus four National Guard divisions to be mobilized.

The WPA announcement revealed the following to be spent on Army-Navy installations in this area: Army War College, $75,000; Washington Navy Yard, including Bellevue Ammunition Depot, and Alexandria torpedo station, $400,000; Anacostia naval air station, $50,000; Fort George G. Meade, Md., $200,000; Arlington Cantonment, Va., $50,000; Fort Myer, Va., $50,000; and Arlington National Cemetery, $43,103. No details were given othe, than the work would ge general construction and rehabilitation work.

Congressmen at Canal

Balboa, Canal Zone, July 17 (AP).—A House Military subcommittee, headed by Representative Charles I. Faddis, of Pennsylvania, arrived at Albrook Field today for investigation of the military needs of the Panama Canal.

Committeemen said preliminary observations indicated good progress had been made toward defense of the canal, but precautions against sabtotage appeared to be the most urgent need.

D. C. Trade Group Votes Opposition To Gas Tax Boost

The board of governors of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association has gone on record unanimously in opposition to any increase in the District gasoline tax, Arthur J. Sundlun, president, said yesterday.

The organization took the stand, he said, that the present two-cent tax is adequate to take care of the highway needs of Washington and that if the revenue were diverted the District would lose $700,000 a year in Federal highway aid.

"To increase the gasoline tax 33 1-3 per cent," said Sundlun, "would be an unnecessary, unjust, and unwarranted increase of the tax burdens of a voteless city of 663,000,

Democratic Delegates Renominate Roosevelt on First Ballot

"tell" President Roosevelt.

And then, while the band blared forth the "Happy Days," Roosevelt theme song of two prior nominations, '32 and '36, the convention adjourned at 1:41 a. m.

Delegates were literally too weary to cheer as they straggled out of the hall, some of them to hop homeward bound trains and planes today without waiting for the Vice Presidential finals.

The convention will reassemble, probably for the last time at 2 p. m. today, to choose the running mate Mr. Roosevelt wants.

And tomorrow as the new Democratic National Committee organizes, Postmaster General Farley will announce the decision that many have expected to terminate his connections with the Democratic Party and the President's Cabinet.

Day Ahead of Schedule

The nomination, voted a full day ahead of schedule, followed convention sessions which saw numerous speakers, fromthe very start, delivering what were virtually nominating speeches for the Chief Executive.

It reached its first climax Tuesday night, when—after the President's message that he was not a "candidate"—had been relayed to the delegates by Senator Alben Barkley, the convention saw a roaring 50-minute demonstration whose dominant theme was the repeated outcry: "We want Roosevelt."

The "draft" stampede climaxed with Roosevelt's selection, was begun with a roar of nominating oratory by Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama.

Glass' Speech Dramatic

Fifteen minutes of third-term tumult was hardly stilled before the convention heard the most dramatic speech of the evening. Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia left a sick room to plead with delegates in the name of religious tolerance and the unwritten two-term "law" to nominate Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Garner's name was presented by Wright Morrow, Texas oil man and close friend of the Vice President. Morrow's voice was drowned out at times by opposition shouts, and Chairman Barkley had to appeal to the convention "to give every delegate a hearing."

Sombreroed and yellow-shirted Texans afterward marched through the hall to the tune of "Eyes of Texas."

State Senator Edward Colgan, who nominated Tydings, was likewise interrupted by shouts and boos.

A few "boos" interrupted Glass as he lauded Farley's "political genius" and loyalty to principle, but until the Virginian lashed out at third-term proposals the delegates were respectfully silent.

This convention, in no temper to abandon the "draft", move the President refused to renounce, before the nominations had made manifest its attitude, shouted down a proposed antithird-term amendment to the party platform.

Wheeler Withdraws

Earlier Senator Wheeler, satisfied with the isolationist foreign affairs plank and platform unanimously approved by the convention, had withdrawn from the contest.

Wheeler said he had assumed all along that the President was not a candidate. He said he interpreted his Tuesday night statement as meaning Mr. Roosevelt, in control of the convention through his managers, both seeks and desires the nomination.

Through Representative Albert Gore, of the Tennessee delegation, Secretary of State Hull had authorized a statement renouncing any political aspiration, and expressing a desire only to work for the cause of peace.

In nominating Roosevelt, Senator Hill said: "With such a man in our party there is no choice left for us."

"He alone is strong enough to match the strength of America against the avalanche," said Hill.

"If peace is possible, and I pray God Almighty it is, he can preserve it for us and he will. If war is inevitable, he can win it for us and he will. . . .

"He has labored long to keep us strong, to keep us at peace and to keep us free. He stands for the symbol of hope for all stricken and suffering."

The magic of Roosevelt's name sent the State standards into the air like a snowstorm in reverse. They all seemed to have joined the parade that was snaking its way through the aisles and around the stadium.

The Maryland standard stayed in place for a while, but soon a Roosevelt follower in that delegation snatched it up, leaving Senator Millard Tydings without a sign to mark his lonely place in the hall.

Virginia stood fast. So did Nevada, Texas, Oklahoma, the Canal Zone and Hawaii.

The Iowa delegates pranced around the stadium with corn stalks flying from their banners.

Hill's presentation of Roosevelt's name marked a last-minute change in plans. The Roosevelt strategy board previously had not planned to present it.

But as Alabama's name was called, the first on the roll-call, Hill mounted the rostrum, delivered his brief speech and the stampede was off.

To Be a Contest

Developments, as the convention appeared to be heading toward a Thursday finish:

A predominantly isolationist Democratic platform, modified at the last minute to contain a mention of aid to the Allies, was adopted.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace appeared favored by the Roosevelt inner-circle to run with the President, but a large panel was "acceptable" to the White House, and Secretary of Commerce Hopkins indicated it would be a race.

The group around Hopkins was reported seeking a "fresh figure," unidentified with politics, for the second place.

Known to have been discussed is Robert M. Hutchins, youthful President of the University of Chicago. The name frequently has come up during "strategy board" discussions of available material.

Won't Bow to Draft

Friends of Farley said he would refuse to be "drafted" to continue as chairman by a convention resolution. There was only the "remotest possibility" that an urgent appeal from the President might persuade him to remain, they said.

The field of available to succeed Farley as chairman was examined, as Frank Walker, close friend of the President, privately insisted he did not want the job.

The name of Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the FDIC, continued to figure, and Joseph E. Davies, special assistant to Secretary of State Hull, was mentioned.

D. C. Driver Jailed For 30 Days After Crash Hurts Trio

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., July 17.—Clifford L. Guncheon, 45, of Washington, was sentenced to 30 days in jail, fined $100 and costs on charges of driving while intoxicated and assessed an additional fine of $10 for driving a car without a permit in Police Court today.

The charges were lodged following an accident yesterday afternoon in which a car driven by Guncheon sideswiped a car operated by W. E. Van Cleaf, Anacostian, just south of the Fredericksburg city limits. Injured in the Van Cleaf car were his daughter, Mrs. Ruth M. Snyder, 28, of Baltimore, and Betty Jean McCawley, six, sustained cuts and bruises. Van Cleaf was cut on the forehead.

Women Get In Their Word On Platform

Gleams in Eyes, Lilts In Voices Reported Over 50-50 Standing

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, July 17.—Every woman in sight today had an extra gleam in her eye, a special lilt in her voice—and there was a reason.

As Mrs. David Tucker Brown, of Washington, president of the Woman's Democratic Club, put it: "Thirty years ago, if you had asked a woman about planks and platforms, she would have thought you were building a reviewing stand."

In 1924 in New York, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt held down a seat outside the platform committee's door, but even some of the women thought her a little overbold.

Today, 25 women helped draft the platform on which Democrats will seek victory in November. Ten more were eligible, but the resolution giving their sex 50-50 representation in group—if there already were women among their State's delegates—passed so rapidly that not all delegations had time to caucus before the platform session.

"We talked as much inside the room as the men," Representative Mary T. Norton declared, "but anything leaking out about the platform's contents definitely came from the masculine side."

As far as could be determined, she was correct. A few senators were passing out choice tidbits to reporters during recess intervals, but the women limited themselves to facts about what they had done "to make feminine history."

Mrs. Condon Speaks

"Edna Munser, of Arizona, was the first women to talk in the committee," they said. Mrs. Arthur D. Condon, of the District, was second. They spoke up about the foreign policy plank.

"But, no, we're not telling what they said."

First woman named to a platform subcommittee was Mrs. Leone Crowley, of South Dakota, who was appointed to help draft the plank on suffrage for the District and Statehood for Puerto Rico and Alaska.

These little bits trickled quickly to approximately 500 women delegates and alternates waiting around with paper and pencils ready to take down any addition to their "big news"—and not at all interested trying to get together on a choice fore the Vice Presidency.

They Dress Smartly

"Anybody the President wants is more than satisfactory to us," more than one of them beamed.

There was no "suffragette" look about the smartly dressed delegates who took their places on the committee. Pretty red-haired Ellen Woodward, of the Social Security Board, became the member from Mississippi. South Carolina selected soft-voiced Clara McMillan, who is their new Congresswoman.

Former Congresswoman Nan Wood Honeyman was named by Oregon. Miss Henrietta D. Stonestreet, of Baltimore, by Maryland; Mrs. Josephine A. Almond, of Roanoke, by Virginia. At a "campaign plans" meeting this morning, Mrs. Dorothy McAllister and the women's division explained they are organized in almost every county in the United States and all set to reelect the President.

Campaign funds will be swelled by contents of Donkey savings banks, which the women were buying like hot cakes. Above the donkey bank table was a sign which said: "A Penny a Day Helps Keep the Elephant Away."

There is no doubt at all that Democratic women are better organized and given more voice in their party affairs than are Republican women. In one respect, however, impressive figures they quote are misleading.

Votes Are Split

For instance, thiey have 204 delegates at this convention, where the Republican women had only 78 in Philadelphia. Due to the fractional voting system used by Democrats, though, their 204 women have only 104½ votes.

The 12 women delegates from Mississippi, to use an illustration, have only one vote and a fraction between them—for that State, with 18 votes, sent 108 delegates.

On the subjects of war and defense, women at this convention have shown no signs of hysteria nor hesitation. With more realism than some of the men have displayed, they have "accepted the future without emotion."

"We are not emotional nor sentimental any more when it comes to government," to quote Mrs. Brown again. "The same thing I believe we can say about our thoughts of our children. We know that our sons would want, like us, to uphold democracy at any cost."

Mrs. Carter Glass, slender and attractive bride of Virginia's senior Senator, was the most looked-at person on the convention platform this afternoon.

Glass Puts Farley In Nomination

nominate that "incomparable Democrat"—Jim Farley.

He said Farley had "conducted the affairs of the Democratic party for seven years in a way that no other man within my recollection of 40 years of public service has ever done."

"Always eager to be an intense partisan, always eager to have his party win, nevertheless he was a man of such a type of patriotism as always to put his country above party considerations, a genius in matters of a political nature, so thoroughly well versed in the sentiment and observance of the action of the people of the United States as to have twice predicted the success in this party so accurately as that he claimed but two States in the Union would go against his party.

"He is not only a man of loyal attachment to the Democratic party, but there is no manner of personal or political reward that would sufficiently secure him for the sacrifices he has made to his party.

"A man of character and intelligence, a man on whose word every human being can always rely, a man who never in all his lifetime ever violated a pledge once given, a man who believes in the unwritten law and the traditions of the Democratic Party as advocated ever since the day of Thomas Jefferson, who less than three years before his death, appealed to the party which he established never to nominate a man for the third term for the Presidency, and Virginia, always mindful of the principles enunciated by Thomas Jefferson as immortal, stands today unmoved, from any source, from the principles advocated by the founder of the Democratic Party, and through consideration for the party itself, for its success and perpetuity, I have come from a sick bed to present to this convention the name of a great Democrat, James A. Farley, of New York."

Friends Outyell Critics

Glass' allusion to Jefferson and the third term had been feared by the New Dealers in charge of the draft-Roosevelt drive. But nobody dared to try and dissuade this little man known as the "snapping turtle of the Senate," and dubbed by the President himself as an "unreconstructed Rebel."

It had been rumored all over the Chicago loop today that the Kelly-Nash machine would pack the galleries with wardheelers to howl down Glass.

This may have been so, but if it was so they were clearly out-yelled tonight by friends of Farley and foes of a third term.

Tonight's demonstration for Farley got under way to the tune of "Irish Eyes Are Smiling. The Massachusetts standard started off the parade around the stadium. Montana fell into line, and then Ohio, Arizona, Canal Zone, Nebraska and Maryland.

Senator Tydings was seen waving the Maryland standard during the uproar that followed Glass' mention of the third term.

Farley's candidacy, of course, was hopeless, but you would have thought he had been nominated tonight, so happy was he in having that veteran political warrior, Carter Glass, in his corner.

The friendship between the short, wispy Virginian and the strapping New Yorker is a deep and abiding one. It began, so they say, in the early days of the New Deal when Senators Glass and Byrd were having trouble getting patronage.

Senator Glass, it is narrated, telephoned Postmaster General Farley and asked why a certain appointment had not gone through.

"Why, I don't know, Senator," Farley said. "I certainly approved it."

"I'd like to come up and see you about it," said Glass.

"Oh, no," said Farley. "It would be an honor if you would let me come down and see you."

Glass took to Farley for many reasons. He liked his honesty and frankness. He liked the way he kept his word. In time he liked "Big Jim" for other qualities, his clean living (a sort of fetish with Glass), his appreciation of party regularity and his capable handling of the Postoffice Department.

Praised at University

A year or so ago, at the University of Virginia, Senator Glass made a speech praising Farley, and the words he used were of the kind that usually are reserved in Virginia for such men as Jefferson and Lee.

And so it was today, as the Democratic National Convention moved toward a climax, that the little Virginio, who time and again has been warned by his physician to forego strenuous oratory, was here in Chicago to make a nominating speech for a man who is beaten before he starts.

Farley, as was reported in The Post yesterday, now is definitely on the way out. He will resign as Postmaster General on September 1. He may go out as chairman of the Democratic National Committee at the end of this convention. If he continues in that role, it will only be until September 1, when the 1940 campaign will just be getting under way.

It looks now as if the arrangements for big Jim to take over the New York Yankees at a reputed salary of $100,000 a year have been completed.

If ever Farley writes a sequel to his book, "Behind the Ballots," it will make an absorbing story. His friends here say that his real troubles in the Roosevelt Administration began after the 1936 victory. They say that the New Dealers—Corcoran, Cohen, Ickes and Hopkins—began boldly to take patronage matters out of his hands, persuading the President to make hundreds of appointments without consulting Farley.

In the drive of the New Dealers to put President Roosevelt over for a third term, according to Farley's friends, they operated all over the country, making overtures to Democratic leaders and promising to "take care of them" if these leaders got on the Roosevelt bandwagon.

These things are said by Farley's friends. The big fellow himself says nothing that would suggest, that he is bitter.

"I am having a grand time," he says.

In all seriousness, it would seem that he is. People swarm around him in the hotel lobbies, trying to shake his hand.

Cab drivers boast about having had him as a fare. When he comes into a room to open press conference, the newspapermen applaud him—strange conduct for newspapermen.

Wheeler Wins Renomination In Montana

Isolationist Senator Has 2½-to-1 Lead Over Townsend Plan Rival

Helena, Mont., July 17 (AP).—Senator Burton K. Wheeler won Democratic renomination for a fourth term in yesterday's primary election.

Wheeler, who has been mentioned as a possible candidate for President, took a wide lead over Attorney General Harrison J. Freebourn, who campaigned as a Townsend Plan champion.

Returns from 807 of the 1,195 precincts gave: Wheeler, 53,525; Freebourn, 19,840.

E. K. Cheadle, jr., of Shelby, former Republican State Chairman, had more votes than the combined totals of his two opponents for the Republican Senatorial nomination.

Miss Jeanette Rankin, of Missoula, first woman ever elected to Congress, was running a close race with Dr. Jacob Thorkelson, of Butte, the incumbent, for Republican nomination for First District Representative.

Returns from 229 of 414 precincts: Rankin, 4,293; Thorkelson, 3,766.

In the same district, Lieut. Gov. Hugh Adair, of Helena, led for the Democratic nomination. Returns from 259 precincts gave him 10,161 to 9,946 for former Representative Jerry O'Connell, Hamilton. Two others trailed.

Melvin Holness, Billings, led William M. Ruffcorn, Glasgow, for the Republican nomination in the Second District, where Representative James F. O'Connor, Livingston, was unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

Police Seek Her Identity

Baltimore police yesterday asked local authorities to assist in efforts to identify this woman, an amnesia victim who is in a Baltimore hospital. The woman collapsed on a Baltimore street about a month ago and she remembers nothing about herself, police said. She is about 28, weighs 115 pounds and is 5 feet 8 inches tall, and wore a gold class ring with the initials "C. P. S."

Willkie Suggests 'New Faces' to Give Colored View

Considerable speculation was aroused among colored Republican politicians by a statement given out at Republican headquarters yesterday that Wendell Willkie "is conscious of the need for new faces to represent the Negro viewpoint."

After calling attention to the naming of T. Gillis Nutter, of Charleston, W. Va., and William E. King, of Chicago, on the campaign advisory committee, by the nominee, Scott said:

"Other additions to the campaign advisory committee are of a kind and type similar to the appointments of Nutter and King, Mr. Willkie having declared that he wishes to bring 'some new blood' into the organization."

Nutter has been a member of the West Virginia House of Delegates, land clerk of the State auditor's office, grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias and grand exalted ruler of Elks.

The other colored member of the advisory committee has served as assistant corporation counsel and assistant State's attorney in Cook County, Ill., and as an assemblyman. At present he is a State Senator and Republican candidate for Congress from the First Illinois District.

Isolationist Platform Adopted

gates yelled, "We want Roosevelt!"

Some people in the galleries joined in, but not to the extent they did in Philadelphia when Wendell Willkie was the hero.

The difference was that Roosevelt was a winner to begin with. In Philadelphia the galleries rooted Willkie home.

This one note of opposition was disposed of within three minutes from the time the amendment was presented.

The platform came to the convention a few hours after the resolutions committee had approved it at the end of an angry all-day session dominated by loud controversy over the declaration on foreign policy. In fact, the convention had to be postponed six hours until the platform row could be ironed out in committee.

Senator Pepper, of Florida, was apparently dissuaded by Administration leaders from carrying out his oft-repeated threat to take the battle for a thorough-going aid-to-Great Britain plank to the floor of the convention.

Fails to Win Roosevelt

In the course of his vain fight in committee for such a plank, he was reliably reported to have telephoned President Roosevelt in Washington for aid and advice. And at the very moment the platform was being finally adopted by the committee, Senator Pepper was emerging from a conference with Gov. Lehman of New York and representatives of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies with the comment, "It's still all up in the air." But it apparently wasn't.

Defense of the "Democratic faith as it is challenged by social maladjustment within and totalitarian greed without" is emphasized in the 5,000-word platform, which time and time again reiterates the achievements of the Democratic Party during the last seven years in rearmament, economic improvement and social legislation.

Indorsing the "brilliant and courageous" leadership of President Roosevelt, the platform throws out a challenge to the Republicans with a strong public power plank and an attack on the G. O. P. nomination of a "utility executive."

Generally speaking, the platform enthusiastically praises the New Deal record, pledges an extension of present policies, and loses no opportunity to jab at the G. O. P.

The foreign affairs plank, by far the most controversial in the platform, declares that "the American people are determined that war . . . shall not come to America."

Promising nonparticipation in foreign wars, the plank asserts that "the world's greatest Democracy cannot afford heartlessly or in a spirit of appeasement to ignore the peace-loving and liberty-loving peoples wantonly attacked by ruthless aggressors."

Enthusiastic applause greeted Chairman Wagner, of the resolutions committee, who read the entire platform, when he reached the pledge "to extend to these peoples all the material aid at our command, consistent with law and not inconsistent with the interests of our own national self-defense."

A declaration that "our defense forces are today at the peak of their peacetime effectiveness was coupled with a strong national defense plank and a reminder that President Roosevelt had correctly warned that "organized assaults against religion, democracy and international good faith threatened our own peace and security."

Japan Expected To Drive to South

Konoye Plans Rule By One Party With Army, Navy Advice

By the Associated Press

Tokio (Thursday), July 18.—The army and navy took a stronger grip than ever on Japan today at Prince Fumimaro, Konoye, advocate of totalitarian one-party principles commissioned to form a new government, outlined plans for military-dictated policies, which may include a "march to the South Seas."

The premier-designate's first action after receiving the imperial command from Emperor Hirohito was to announce that national policies would be formulated by himself, the war and naval ministers and the foreign minister. He conferred today with War Minister Shunroku Hata and Naval Minister Zengo Yoshida, and moved for speedy appointment of their successors.

Political circles regarded it as a foregone conclusion that the prince's choice for foreign minister would be Yosuke Matsuoka, former president of the South Manchurian Railway whose bristling reply in 1933 to League of Nations censure of the Japanese seizure of Manchukuo was a sensation.

The new policies are expected to pivot around Japan's moves in the South Seas, which the army is advocating as the future field of action.

Premier Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai was forced to resign Tuesday by army leaders who regarded his foreign policy as too cautious in the face of the French and Netherlands collapse in Europe.

Japanese determination to press on was evidenced yesterday by the announcement Britain has agreed to close the Burma route to the Chinese government at Cunghking for three months.

The foreign office said Great Britain had agreed to stop traffic in gasoline, trucks, railway equipment and other vital supplies from Hongkong effective today. Arms traffic has been prohibited since January, 1939.

As a result of the governmental shift, Japan was expected in foreign quarters to pursue a more vigorous policy toward Siam, British Burma, French Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies, and possibly to seek closer cooperation with Italy and Germany.

The movement to dissolve all Japanese political parties and melt them into one big political unit under Prince Konoye went forward with a bound when it was announced one of the principal parties, the Seiyukai, for 34 years a force in Japanese politics, had disbanded and pledged to join the new party.

Delegates Make History and Noise

The parade snowballed around the arena, picking up delegates and their noise makers from all but a handful of States.

Delegates swept across the stadium floor in a scene of turbulence and confusion matching the Chicago Black Hawks' last hockey game in this arena. Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles, known on four continents for ice-cool poise, ran a linen handkerchief under his chin.

Throughout the session delegates tried to stir the still, smoky air with pasteboard fans. The fans carried an American flag and one word, "Wheeler" the Montana Senator who had withdrawn from the Presidential race a few hours earlier.

Delegates and spectators peeled coats and loosened ties early in the proceedings. The Roosevelt demonstration over, the convention's lung-power appeared exhausted. Desultory booing and short volleys of applause were the only interruptions until the result of the convention's labors was annouced.

The evening brought forth two notable pieces of understatement. The first was contributed by Chairman Barkley, of Kentucky, in appealing for order when the convention moved from the platform to the business of nomination. "We are now taking up one of our most important functions," he said.

Pat Doyle, Massachusetts delegate, stirred laughter on the floor when he concluded his seconding speech for James A. Farley with the statement that his man's candidacy was "in a difficult situation."

An early tendency to boo the oratory of Farley and Garner forces gave way to tolerant applause from the floor and galleries as the convention moved on to the result everyone took for granted.

Germans Call Channel Coast Blitzkrieg Base

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, July 17.—A surprise attack by sea and air launched from the Channel coast of France is indicated by the German weekly Die Wehrmacht as a possible operating drive in the Reich's offensive against Britain.

Reviewing the possibilities of the French coast as an operative base against the British Isles in this periodical, Vice Admiral Pfeiffer pointed out that from the 630 kilometers of French coast opposite the 165 kilometers of the British coast fast vessels could cross to Britain in from 40 minutes to 4 hours, while troop transports would require about three times as long.

Airplanes, he said, could effectively support such an advance made by sea, which, "made in close cooperation with these two arms of the fighting forces, is secured in every way against surprise." The narrow limits of the Channel, he points out, further present excellent opportunities for "minor" warfare of speedboats, mines, smokescreens and submarines, which could be used "with great promise of success."

Named as ports from which such an offensive could be launched were Dunkerque, Calais, Boulogne, Abbeville, Dieppe, Le Havre, Caen, Cherbourg, St. Malo and Brest. All these harbors, he said, either were or have now been equipped with "effective" defenses. Railroad connections with the interior, he said, are intact. The number of ports available, he pointed out, present a great advantage for the attacker, since the enemy, never knowing from which harbor the attack may come, must deploy his defenses along a wide front.

The effectiveness of submarine warfare, Admiral Pfeiffer concludes, has been greatly increased by the possibility of establishing bases all along the channel. Today, instead of having to pass through the dangerous Straits of Dover or alternatively making a long trip northward around the British Isles, U-boats in less than 24 hours can take up positions in St. George Channel, at the entrance to the Irish Sea, where they can control all shipping coming to England from the Atlantic.

[The high command reported that unfavorable weather conditions on Tuesday limited aerial warfare, but that German bombers attacked the harbor at Thurso, Scotland, 21 miles north of Wick, and bombed a British camp near Scapa Flow, United Press dispatch said.]

Tokyo Pledge To Seek Peace Is Reported

Promise Exchanged For Burma Road's Closing, London Says

By the United Press

London, July 17.—Japan promised to attempt to reach a general peace settlement with China before October 18 as part of the agreement reached today with Great Britain to close for three months the Burma supply route to China, it was learned authoritatively tonight.

British quarters reaffirmed their readiness to offer their good offices to end the long Chinese-Japanese war provided their services were desired by the governments in Tokyo and Chungking.

Announcement in Parliament of the Anglo-Japanese agreement, forced by Japan, caused an uproar and the deal was called "shameful." It was consummated despite the declaration of Cordell Hull, American Secretary of State, that it would be considered by the United States an unwarranted obstacle to world trade.

The imminence of a German onslaught by sea and air against the British Isles was described as the paramount reason for Britain's important concessions to Japan.

U. S. Policy "Ambiguous"

Although the United States' continued shipments of strategic raw materials to Japan frequently has been regarded in London as making Washington's Far Eastern policy "ambiguous," it is generally believed that today's agreement probably will provoke severe criticism in the United States.

Coupled with the continuance in office of Chamberlain "appeasers," today's partial acceptance of Japan's demands is expected also to increase home dissatisfaction with the policies of the Churchill government although the position of the prime minister himself still appears to be impregnable.

Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, who attacked the agreement, demanded sarcastically whether it was likely to be more successful than previous attempts at appeasement such as Munich. He asked whether the British government, in view of Hull's statement, was going to refuse transit to United States goods consigned to China, most of which has been going by the Burma road.

"I think it rather irresponsible to make statements of that sort," replied Richard Austen Butler, foreign undersecretary, whose announcement had set off the uproar.

Butler Is Evasive

Wilfred Roberts, who sided with Mander, asked Butler point blank whether the United States had expressed approval or disapproval of the agreement in advance of the accord.

Butler replied evasively:

"We must leave interpretation of the American statement to Americans."

Roberts said he was not satisfied and would raise the question later.

The Anglo-Japanese agreement stipulated:

1. Britain would prohibit for three months from July 18 transit through Burma of arms, ammunition, gasoline, trucks and railway material.

2. Britain would prohibit for a similar period the export of these goods from Hongkong to China.

3. Japanese consular officials in Hongkong and Rangoon would maintain close contact with British authorities regarding measures to be taken for the purpose of making the agreement effective.

The export of arms and ammunition from Hongkong has been prohibited since January, 1939, but gasoline, trucks and railway material were added to the list.

Chinese circles here bitterly compared Britain's action to the position which would arise if the United States prevented war materials from reaching Britain and then offered to promote Anglo-German peace talks.

Rotary Clubs Pledge Aid to U. S. Defense, Plan Drive to Speed Up Recruiting of Guard

CLUB LEADERS—Those active in Tuesday night's sessions of the 180th District of Rotary at the Willard were (from left) Thomas Bess, district governor; L. Bert Nye, president of the Washington club and Roy E. Danzer, of Hagerstown, and J. Milton Patterson, of Baltimore, both past district governors

Concluding its two-day assembly on a patriotic note, the 180th district of Rotary clubs yesterday pledged support of home defense plans and agreed to encourage enlistments in the National Guard.

They were told by Roger J. Whiteford, local attorney and member of the newly formed District Defense Committee, that National Guard enlistments are being discouraged by employers who refuse to grant their workers time off for training encampments. The Rotarians will return to their home communities determined to change this situation.

Seeking 600 Recruits

In Washington, Whiteford said, Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, National Guard commander, is seeking 600 recruits for a three-week encampment period next month. But enlistments are few, he said, for the reason given.

"It is up to us as business executives to persuade other employers to hold open the jobs of these men until they return from camp, and to pay all salaries during the training period," said Whiteford.

Although the younger men are willing to do their part in the Nation's preparedness program, they hesitate to jeopardize their jobs for the purpose, he said.

Whiteford also admonished the older men, now too old for active service, to begin thinking about where and how they would fit into the national defense scheme should an emergency arise.

Distribution of a $40,000 Rotary relief fund was outlined by Dr. Thomas Bess, of Keyser, W. Va., governor of the Eighteenth District. He reported that $25,000 of the fund was allotted to the Internaitonal Red Cross; $5,000 to the American Red Cross and the distribution committee is now considering the most effective means of disposing of the balance.

At yesterday's luncheon meeting Dr. Bess described the aims and purposes of Rotary, explaining that present world conditions warrant widespread practice of the club's motto—"Service Above Self."

The meeting closed with discussions on youth problems and Rotary's policy of international service.

Roosevelt Reply Expected Today

rejecting a draft nomination would be without precedent in American political history. In 1932 the President flew to the Chicago Convention to accept the call of his party and in 1936 he appeared in person on the rostrum at Philadelphia.

This time, however, he has apparently ruled out a trip to Chicago by saying no when a reporter asked him point-blank last week if he would go to the Windy City. This negative reply was repeated this week by Stephen Early, the President's secretary.

President Roosevelt devoted his attention yesterday almost exclusively to the proceedings in Chicago.

With his direct telephone wire to Chicago at one elbow and a radio at the other, the President held himself "open and available" for talks with party leaders directing the third term drive.

The President stayed up until 1:15 a. m. yesterday morning to listen in on the Barkley speech and announcement, which ended in a half-hour Roosevelt demonstration, Early disclosed.

And last night, for the momentous session of the convention, Mr. Roosevelt was surrounded by a group of friends and White House workers as he listened in his oval study while the delegates chose him for the third time to lead them.

With him were Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, old-time friend and political counselor, of New York; Gen. Edwin Watson, secretary and companion; Admiral Ross T. McIntire, his physician; Franklin Roosevelt, jr.; Early, Marguerite LeHand, secretary; Capt. Daniel Callahan, naval aide; Miss Grace Tully, Miss Roberta Barrows and Miss Antoinette Batchelder, secretaries, and Miss Louise Hackmeister, chief telephone operator.

DuPont Gardens

Pierre duPont will throw open his famous Longwood Gardens, near Wilmington, Del., to a group of Washington sightseers Sunday, according to plans announced yesterday by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

The party will leave Washington at 8 a. m. Reservations may be made at the B. & O. city ticket office, 1508 H street northwest.

Vienna Milk Dealer Faces License Quiz

Sheriff Eppa P. Kirby, of Fairfax County, Va., Tuesday was requested by the State milk commission to summon L. C. Payne, of Vienna, Va., to appear before the commission at Richmond to show cause why his license to distribute milk should not be revoked for alleged violations of the rules governing the Arlington-Alexandria market.

South May Get Extra Delegates In Next Convention

Chicago, July 17 (A.P.)—A threatened floor fight over the reapportionment issue apparently was forestalled today when the South accepted a compromise arrangement toward States voting Democratic two additional votes in future national conventions.

Approved by the rules committee, the new plan is subject to ratification by the convention. The vote is not expected until after a Presidential nominee is selected.

It is a way of compensating the South for the abolition of the two-thirds nominating rule in 1936. As long as that rule was operative, Southern States exercised, in effect, a veto power over the choice of Presidential candidates.

Southern leaders agreed to the bonus of two additional delegates-at-large on the assurance the national committee would give further study to the whole question of reapportionment before the 1944 convention.

The compromise upset a plan offered by the national committee to give only one additional delegate to States going Democratic in the preceding Presidential election.

Italy Set to Strike British in South

Attack in Conjunction With Nazi Invasion Of Isles Is Hinted

By the United Press

Rome, July 17.—Italy is in a position to launch a general offensive in the Mediterranean-African zone, possibly in conjunction with a German assault on the British Isles, military circles claimed today.

Today's military communique said that Alexandria, important British naval base, has been bombed again and that Italian troops had captured Gherzan, in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, taking prisoners and a British flag. An Italian submarine sank a British tanker, the communique said, admitting that another Italian submarine had been lost.

The fall of Gherzan, a frontier post, followed closely Italian capture of Moyale and reduction of the Dolo salient.

In new Italian air raids on Malta, British air and naval base, two British planes were shot down, the communique said. One Italian plane was lost. Italian planes also bombed again Marsa Matruh and Sidi Barani, in Egypt, near the Libyan border.

British air raids over Agorsat, Asmara and Assab caused only slight damage, the Italian communique said, as did a night attack on Tobruk.

General headquarters of the Italian armed forces released its first list of naval casualties today, stating that since the war started the Italian navy had lost 610 dead and 145 wounded. Of those listed as dead, 325 were known to have died in action and 285 were missing and believed dead.

Ciano Still in Rome

Rome, July 17 (AP).—Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, whose departure for Berlin has been widely expected, was still in Rome today and there was no indication when or if he would go.

(Reports current yesterday were that Ciano was going to the German capital for a conference with Nazi officials, perhaps to discuss a final peace offer to Britain.)

Today the Rome authorities were not only silent, but warned against any further speculation about the trip, and one official denied the Rome radio had carried a report the foreign minister would arrive in Berlin Friday.

Heart Attacks Kill 2 Delegates To Convention

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 17.—Circuit Judge Thomas J. Rowe, of St. Louis, was found dead in his hotel room at the Missouri headquarters of the Democratic National Convention here late today.

His body was discovered a short time after Richard W. Norton, 55, of San Antonio, Tex., an intimate friend of Vice President Garner and a delegate, died in his hotel suite of a heart attack.

The wealthy Texan was a supporter of Garner for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Supporter of Garner

The death of Rowe, a State circuit judge, also was attributed to a heart attack.

Cited Paper for Contempt

Judge Rowe last winter cited the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and two members of its staff for contempt, and imposed fines and jail sentences, which are now before the Missouri State Supreme Court on appeal. The court has set October 8 for arguments. His death will have no legal effect on the status of the case.

Judge Rowe took action against the newspaper as a result of two editorials and a cartoon on dismissal of an extortion case.

The newspaper was fined $2,000; Ralph Coghlan, editor of the editorial page, was fined $200 and sentenced to 20 days in jail; Daniel R. Fitzpatrick, noted cartoonist, was given a 10-day jail sentence and fined $100.

NO BOMBS BURSTING—Mrs. Kathleen Blake, a widow, and her son, Peter, 8, are shown at the Wardman Park pool. They are refugees from England

'Going Sticky, but We'll Carry On,' Says British Refugee Here

Former Ambulance Driver, Arriving To Join Her Fiance, Embassy Aide, Is Confident England Will Win Out

"We are going through a sticky time, but we shall carry on fighting and eventually come out on top."

The speaker was Mrs. Kathleen Blake, an Englishwoman, who, coming to the United States to join her fiance, killed two birds with one stone by taking charge of five refugee boys on the voyage across. One of them, 8-year-old Peter Blake, is the son of Mrs. Blake, a widow.

Mother and son arrived in Washington Monday night, after a week of sightseeing in New York, where Mrs. Blake's other four shipboard charges were delivered to their friends and relatives. Interviewed yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel, she was found to be already an ardent Washington enthusiast—yet not a little regretful that her active wartime service is over, at least temporarily.

Drove an Ambulance

"I drove an ambulance in England," she explained simply.

It was only a few weeks before she sailed from Liverpool on the Samaria that Mrs. Blake met Nevill Godwin, a young diplomat on duty at the foreign office who had just been ordered transferred to the British Embassy here. Two days after their introduction they were engaged and a few days later Godwin sailed for America.

"Our crossing on the Samaria was a pleasant one," said Mrs. Blake, "even if we did have to wear or carry our lifebelts from morning until nightfall. The Samaria was only about 15 miles distant when the Arandora Star was torpedoed July 2, with a loss of 1,000 lives.

Son Agrees

"We took part in lifeboat drills every day. The children—there were 267 of them aboard—thought it was quite exciting."

Peter, beside his mother, smiled his assent.

There is no doubt in Mrs. Blake's mind that Britain will emerge victorious in the present struggle.

"We've too much to lose to give in," she said, adding that her countryman are solidly united for a fight to the last ditch.

Japanese Press Demand for Apology

Shanghai (Thursday), July 18.—Japanese-American difficulties over the arrest by United States Marines of Japanese gendarmes 11 days ago, reached a dangerous deadlock today, after 3,000 Japanese demanded in a mass meeting here that the Marines apologize or be disarmed.

Authoritative circles declared the case has far outgrown its original proportions now that the Japanese have invoked the honor of their army, and that the nation would not be satisfied with anything less than a United States apology.

Col. De Witt Peck, Marine commander, stuck firmly to his original stand that the Marines acted within their legal rights when they arrested the 14 Japanese plainclothesmen in the United States defense area of the Shanghai International Settlement, July 7.

He was understood to be willing to listen, nevertheless, to any further evidence that the gendarmes were "brutally mistreated."

The Japanese mass meeting also asked that the Japanese army publish the text of three inconclusive consultations between Col. Peck and Japanese Maj. Gen. Saburo Miura.

A Japanese Embassy spokesman described as "unfortunate" the action of 100 prominent Americans in Manila, who sent messages here and to Washington urging a firm United States stand.

Lewis Warns Labor to Keep Its Guard Up

John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president, cautioned labor against "dropping its guard" today, asserting that it was "in times like these that a well organized bloc of reactionaries in Congress will attempt to destroy all labor legislation."

He made the assertion in a letter accompanying a report of the C. I. O. legislative committee.

The report called for maintenance of existing labor standards in new defense bills and said that efforts to "relax" the Walsh-Healey and wage-hour laws in legislation to speed up naval ship construction already had been defeated.

British Expect Triple Attack Within Month

Air Minister Foresees Great Onslaught By Land, Sea and Air

By International News Service

London (Thursday), July 18.—Great Britain last night warned, amid new German air attacks, that it must expect a tremendous triple German offensive within a month.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, air minister, declared in an empire-wide broadcast:

"It is certain that we shall have to withstand an air attack on a scale greater than any the enemy has yet launched. Perhaps the great onslaught will be made against Britain within the next month—by land, sea and air simultaneously.

"If it does come, it will fail."

One of the most remarkable aerial feats of the war was revealed in an air ministry announcement that a huge Sunderland flying boat bombed and sank a German U-boat in the South Atlantic. Sunderlands are long range four-motored flying boats capable of carrying big bombs. They have a wing spread of 113 feet. The submarine was assumed to be of from 1,500 to 2,000 tons.

A British naval sloop picked up the submarine's survivors.

The admiralty officially admitted early today that a British cruiser was damaged in the Mediterranean under Italian air attack, and that "some casualties" were suffered aboard the warship.

In the face of Italian claims that British capital ships and other war vessels sustained serious damage in the Mediterranean engagement of July 9, the admiralty reiterated that the British suffered no damage or casualties in the encounter. The communique stated:

"The admiralty regrets to announce that some casualties occurred aboard one British cruiser which was damaged during Italian air attacks on July 8.

"The damage, however, did not affect the fighting ability of the cruiser in partaking in the action with the Italian fleet on July 9 in which no British casualties occurred. The cruiser at present is again in service."

The 1,359-ton Eire passenger ship City of Limerick was sunk with a loss of two lives during an air attack off Ushant last Monday, it was disclosed last night.

The admiralty announced that the British 13,241-ton naval auxiliary vessel Van Dyck was sunk in an air attack off the Norwegian coast June 10. Seven men were killed and 161 taken prisoner by the Germans.

Bad weather reduced aerial activity to a minimum Tuesday and Wednesday. Nevertheless, the air ministry announced that German aircraft bombed a few points in southeast and northeast England, also near a town in Scotland. Several persons were killed and others wounded.

In each raid British fighters and antiaircraft defenses engaged the raiders, and in the attack on northeastern England prevented the Germans from reaching their objectives.

Havana Expects Roosevelt at Parley

White House Won't Comment on Report; Japanese Moves Complicate U. S. Stand On Fate of Colonies Lost by Conquest

Havana, July 17 (U.P.).—Unconfirmed reports circulated here tonight that President Roosevelt would be urged to attend the Havana Pan American Conference before it adjourns.

President Federico Bru will address the opening session of the conference Sunday night in the House chamber.

No Comment Here

The White House last night declined to comment on the possibility that President Roosevelt might accept an invitation to attend the Havana conference.

Leo Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, today broadcast a preconference message to the Latin American countries in Spanish. He stressed the threat of the totalitarian nations to American institutions and expressed confidence that the necessary American unity would be obtained.

Near East Complications

By the Associated Press

As Secretary Hull and an official delegation prepared to depart today for the meeting of American foreign ministers at Havana, developments in the Far East complicated impending discussion on the future of European possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

For the second successive day, the Secretary of State showed the concern of this government at events in Asia by reminding Japan by implication that it could not claim the rights of a belligerent under international law in the undeclared war against China.

He thus explained the government's opposition to the closing of the Burma supply route to China or any other world trade arteries in answering German claims that the United States should adopt the same stand toward the British blockade in Europe.

Situation Differs

Where nations are at war and are pronounced belligerents, Secretary Hull declared at his press conference, they have the right under international law to intercept commerce. But in the case of a privately owned highway running through the interior of nations not at war, he said, an entirely different rule prevails.

On Tuesday Hull said that the government opposed a British agreement to close the Burma road for a period of three months, thus cutting off vital war supplies from the Chinese armies.

The fate of French, Netherlands and British possessions in the Far East was described reliably as an important factor in preliminary exchanges among 21 American republics on the future of foreign territories in this hemisphere.

What was feared in connection with proposals for establishment of a mandate or protectorate over these possessions was that Japan might find some basis for action against possessions in the Far East, such as French Indo-China and the Netherlands East Indies.

Japan Answers Hull

Tokyo, July 17.—Japan sees no reason to accept the observations of Secretary of State Hull on closing of the Burma-Indo China routes, Yakachiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, told the Japanese press today. He said that Japan's demand was a question of military necessity between Japan and France and Japan and Britain. Japan had asked and they agreed, he said, to close the traffic. Hull's remarks, he said, amounted to a request that Japan should acknowledge America's right to assist the government of Chiang Kai-shek and it was impossible for Japan to agree.

Browder Dissents

New York, July 17 (AP).—Communist Earl Browder said in a statement today that "American imperialists" were determined to use the Pan-American conference opening Saturday at Havana "to harness Latin America to their war plans."

"The imperialist war creates a real threat to Latin America," said Browder, Communist Presidential candidate who is free under bail pending appeal of a prison sentence for passport fraud.

Spain Suspect

Havana, July 17 (AP).—Cuba's secretary of state, Miguel Angel Campa, who will preside over the Havana conference of American foreign ministers, said today the rupture of relations between Spain and Chile might be an authoritarian move to disrupt the harmony of the conference.

Neither Campa nor early arriving delegates could see that the move might upset the harmony of the meeting. They said the Chilean-Spanish break might prove a ticklish question for the conference, but predicted it would be solved.

They pointed out that interest in the severance of relations would be general because for all but Brazil and Haiti of the Latin-American nations Spain is the mother country.

Rep. Dempsey to Oppose Chavez for Senatorship

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, announced today he would seek the Democratic nomination for Senator from New Mexico, opposing Senator Chavez.

'Ramparts' Premiere Set For Tuesday at Keith's

Gala Event to Usher in Unique Film Play; Chaplin Nears Home Stretch on "No. 6;" This, That and the Other About the Theater

YESTERDAY'S MOST IMPOSING piece of mail was the poster-sized invitation to attend the world premiere of "The Ramparts We Watch," first feature-length production ever made by the editors of Time and Life, producers also of "The March of Time."

BELL

After a little excusable preliminary wavering as to exactly when—but never in the matter of where—the first presentation on any screen of "Ramparts" now is definitely set for RKO-Keith's Theater next Tuesday night, July 23, at 8:30 o'clock. The occasion will be marked by appropriately extravagant to-do, with the house, and presumably the audience, all glossed up for an extraordinary event.

"The Ramparts We Watch," according to all authentic report, is an extraordinary picture. It flouts the usual productional methods of Hollywood and tells its own story in its own way. That story is a detailed recital of the effects of the war years of 1914-18 upon the members of a typical American community. The cast of 1,400 contains 73 principals with important speaking parts and is reputedly composed exclusively of non-professionals, to lend greater realism to typical life in a small American community. The content of the film, of course, bears a direct relationship to the present state of world affairs and the crisis that once again faces the United States and its 130,000,000 inhabitants.

As a further impetus to complete naturalness, use of the customary "angle shots," introduction of "montage" effects and all other trickery of studio photography have been abandoned. The picture was in production for more than a year and a half. Interspersed with the more placid action on this side, are actual historic scenes of the First World War, culled from the invaluable motion picture libraries of the U. S. Army Signal Corps, the National Archives, in Washington, the Imperial War Museum of London and the Archives Cinematographiques in Paris.

"The Ramparts We Watch," in short, is not a "documentary" film, but a living drama of a crucial period in our history which, unhappily, bids fair to be repeated—or at least approximated in its sinister implications.

The impending premiere of "Ramparts" has occasioned a steady procession of the RKO-Radio high command through the National Capital these latter days and weeks, plus a comparable representation of the executive staff of the producers. It was no longer ago than Tuesday midnight that our old sidekick, S. Barrett McCormick, national director of advertising and publicity for RKO-Radio, called up for a unique purpose. Barry was not trying to "plant" a story, but merely wished to express his pride in being associated with so significant an enterprise. That's the way they all seem to feel about it.

Speaking of much-discussed films, it begins to look as if Charlie Chaplin's "Production No. 6" might finally be released, after all. This is the "Dictator" picture that has been hanging fire for years now—almost like David Selznick's "G. W. T. W."—the basis of that $1,000,000 suit against Life, for premature publication of "stills" from the picture, and the one that many have prophesied never would be shown. What makes me think that possibly it will be is that Chaplin has set Meredith Willson, composer of two renowned symphonic numbers and maestro of N. B. C.'s "Good News of 1940," to work scoring and orchestrating a musical accompaniment for the action. Willson expects to be engrossed in his new duties for the next month.

Audiences at the Earle recently having been doused with fragrant attars during an "Apple Blossom" number, those at Loew's Capitol during the week beginning tomorrow, will be treated to a cola binge. Vats of a popular brand of refreshing summer drink will be installed on the orchestra and balcony levels, presided over by beautiful young barmaids, whose sole duty will be to ladle out tankards of the pap to the dehydrated, as Wally Beery would say. This weapon of combat against the midsummer temperatures will be over and above the air-conditioning and will cost the parched patron no more.

Those who remember her in the old silent days will be glad to learn that May McAvoy, who returned to the screen in "Two Girls on Broadway," will advance to a more important role as Miss Lawton, secretary to Fashion Magazine Editor Myrna Loy, in M-G-M's "Third Finger, Left Hand."

Last-Long-Middle-Aisle Note

Don't let that title delude you into the belief that the picture is a "ringer."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, July 17.

Because they're having such fun, they're calling "Philadelphia Story" "All This and Hepburn, Too."

HOPPER

Katie wasn't there when I went a-visiting, but Virginia Weidler, who's just turned 13, was doing a superb scene which reminded me of Gertrude Lawrence in her balmiest moment. Jimmy Stewart, as a newspaperman, and Ruth Hussey had come to Philadelphia to see how the upper brackets lived, when in breezed Virginia, on her toes, wearing her sister's diamond necklace on the front of her dress, to introduce herself.

She lapsed into perfect French, clipping it at the rate of a mile a minute—said she'd picked it up in Paris where her father was a banker "with the Morgans, you know." "And I can sing and play at the same time—listen!"

Dashed out of the set still on her toes into the drawing room and made good her threat. Jimmy, with his mouth open like gates ajar, said, "Gee whiz! When I was her age I was just beginning to talk".

The Red Cross had better grab Jimmy quickly, for he, Hank Fonda and Mischa Auer are dying to repeat for the Hollywood mob the performance they did in Houston, Tex. Jimmy said, "We had a whole plane to ourselves—it was like being back at Princeton in a fraternity house. But the funniest sight there was John Swope, who went along to take pictures, and a few days before had made a round trip to New York on the test trip of the stratoliner.

"John grew sleepy. When camera boys gathered waist deep to snap Martin Dies. John promptly went to sleep in the midst of all the excitement.". Jimmy was scared that Dies would begin investigating John . . .

Stopped by to see Bill Powell, who was wearing a Boy Scout suit that looked as though it had been fitted to the rear end of an elephant. Everyone calls him "Droopy Drawers." He was falling down what looked like a rathole, but I suppose it was a well. His young bride had a few minutes off, from "Bittersweet"—came over to kiss him, snuggled up. Bill's hands, face and arms were covered with dirt, so she unconsciously ran her hand up his sleeve and and kept it there all the time she was talking to him. It's grand to see Bill so happy at last.

Wait till you see "Pappy" Gable in "Boom Town." Boy—does he give! Then along comes Spencer Tracy, underplays every one of "Pappy's" scenes—and gets! . . . On the hottest day of the week the Ritz brothers got cold feet standing against a wall while knives were thrown at 'em.

When I asked Fred Allen if anything important had happened to him, he answered, "Well, the only thing I can remember is ordering 1,000 island dressing at the Paramount commissary yesterday. But they're retrenching—I only got 750 islands."

The Elders Look a Little Worried

FAY BAINTER AND ADOLPHE MENJOU as they will be seen in the new picturization of "A Bill of Divorcement," opening tomorrow on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater. They appear in the roles first created for the cameras by Billie Burke and John Barrymore, with Maureen O'Hara in the part that brought initial screen fame to Katharine Hepburn

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 17 (INS).—I pinned Dick Rowland down at the preview of "South of Pago Pago" and asked him about Martha Scott. He admitted she would be starred in "Three Cheers for Miss Bishop," based on the novel by Bess Streeter Aldrich.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

John Stahl will be signed to direct this American cavalcade, which is a story of a school teacher, whose life from 18 to 80 is filled with historical happenings. John has always had a hankering to make an American cavalcade of this novel, and he should make a great picture of Stephen Vincent Benet's adaptation and Sheridan Gibney and Adelaide Heilbron's screen play. Some outlay of authors, isn't it?

The Hollywood Negro movie favorites will have their own Academy Award come August 1. This was decided at a meeting of the Hollywood branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Negroes, headed by Thomas Griffith. Interesting that there are so many fine artists of this race on the screen it is possible to have independent awards. The nominations for the 1940 winners are Ben Carter for "Maryland," Hattie McDaniel for "Gone With the Wind," Louise Beavers for 'No Time for Comedy," Willie Best for "The Ghost Breakers," Ernest Whitman for "The Return of Frank James," Clarence Muse for "Maryland," Eddie Anderson (Rochester) and Theresa Harris for "Buck Benny Rides Again." The Hall Johnson Choir will be given a special award. Veteran Dancer Bill Robinson will hand over the "Oscars"—ebony statuettes—to the winners.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Loretta Young and Tom Lewis will set a definite date for their wedding in a few days. Her engagement was formally announced at a luncheon held on the lawn of her mother's home Monday. Sixty guests were invited and the tables were decorated in white, as befits a bridal feast; Mary Pickford hosted a small dinner in honor of Bud Ernst, Gwynne Pickford's husband; Peggy Diggins' latest escort is Ricardo Cortez, who beaued her to Ciro's; Mary Brian and Robert Gump dining tete-a-tete at the Tail o' the Cock; Peggy Fears, who has been in Mexico for weeks, has now gone East. Blumey remains in Mexico City.

Bette Davis leaves next week for her annual jaunt to New England. She will be gone three months; Victor Mature's heart throb is Dorothy Elly; Wynn Rocomora and Alice Davey a Brown Derby twosome; Bobby Jordan is buying Edith Fellows ice cream sodas; lots of openings tomorrow night.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 17.

THE AMERICAN TOBACCO CO. has expressed interest in sponsoring "Information Please," and probably will make the deal . . . Constance Cummings, now in London with her husband, is seeking American backing for her tour here in Shaw's "St. Joan," for the benefit of British war relief . . .

CLIFFORD ODETS has written his first song, with music by Hanns Eisler. It will be called "Five Items From a Writer's Journal." For each of the themes, Odets has taken an excerpt from the diary he keeps—about loneliness, work, America, etc.. . . . The playwright who is dramatizing the life of Nijinsky, told a group Monday night how fascinating was the subject—the greatest dancer of his day, mad for 20 years, suddenly being restored to sanity, and having to learn of the changes which have happened . . . of Stalin, television, the talkies, Hitler, the defeat of France, the destruction of Holland, Belgium . . . France fighting England . . . "I think a better last act," said Odets, "would be for Nijinsky not to learn about these changes, and return to the happiness of his insanity."

LADY CUNARD, who returned to this country two weeks ago after a 25-year absence, is considering applying for a restoration of her American citizenship . . . The censors in London have hit upon this system of regulating the mail sent from England: All letters which the censors have no time to read are kept for 21 days, and then released for mailing. Their theory is that any news which might be harmful becomes stale in three weeks .

BEN HECHT, whose daughter was married last week, does not relish the thought that this indicates that he no longer can be considered boyish. And Hecht still cannot be reconciled to the fact that within a year he may become a grandfather . . . And so to defer the inevitable day when the status of a grandfather would shatter the illusion of youth—an illusion pierced only by the presence of a few meager strains of gray in his hair—Hecht has promised his daughter $5,000 a year for every year that he's not a grandfather.

THE TWO WOMEN employed by Dr. Anna Swift, who were arrested when her establishment was raided, have been removed from their cells to a hotel suite, where they're spilling the story to the District Attorney's office . . . Don't believe any published report that Pierre Van Paassen is suing his publishers. Van Paassen's "Days of Our Years" still is a best-seller, and all concerned are happy . . . John Steinbeck, who still is collecting royalties for "The Grapes of Wrath," hasn't invested any of that money in stocks, bonds or business enterprises. Those royalties, together with the money he received from the movie-sale, have been deposited in savings-banks. Steinbeck now has 30 bankbooks, each denoting limit-deposits of $5,000.

AUGUST HECKSCHER purchased a straw hat recently, in a shop on Madison avenue. The hat cost $1.39, but Heckscher—who didn't reveal his identity—confessed that he has only $1.25 on his person . . . "That's all right, take the hat, and you'll owe me 14 cents," said the proprietor. "You look like a man I can trust" . . . The next day Heckscher visited an industrialist who expressed admiration for that hat, and who then was told the 14-cent story . . . "Each year, when I send my 600 employes to a summer camp, I give each one a straw hat," said the industrialist. "Let's reward that man." And so he went to the Madison avenue shop where Heckscher sent him, and bought out the entire stock.

THE FORT MILLS Army post in the Philippines sent a wireless dispatch, via Governors Island, to Farrar & Rinehart, the publishers—requesting one copy of "The Savannah Cook Book" . . . When the Republican Party asked Irving Berlin for the right to use his song, "God Bless America," he consented, but said it couldn't be an exclusive right, because he had written it for the entire Nation.

Dogs Still Safest For Far North

Airplanes have opened the last great frontier of America, the north woods, but when blizzards blow it is still the dog team which does the traveling.

This was determined by the Paramount research department while studying technical details for the roaring blizzard which is photographed in Technicolor for "Untamed."

Two Unique Films Strengthen Midsummer Amusement Parade

"OUR TOWN." Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize play comes to the Capitol screen tomorrow morning with Frank Cravan playing his original and all-important role of the stage manager. Although performed on the stage without scenery, the film version recreates for the screen the New Hampshire town of Grovers Corners. Martha Scott also plays her stage role of Emily Webb. William Holden, Fay Bainter, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee, Buelah Bondi and Stuart Erwin are the other leading players. The Capitol variety revue will be headlined by the pint-sized tenor of the air lanes, Little Jackie Heller.

Earle

"MY LOVE CAME BACK." Olivia de Havilland, Jeffry Lynn, Charles Winninger, Eddie Albert and Jane Wyman have the central roles in this romance of a music school and its youthful students. Others in the comedy's cast are Spring Byington, Grant Mitchell, Ann Gillis and William Orr. Red Skelton returns to headline the Earle stage revue with Edna Stillwell as his assistant. Franklyn D'Amore, Gil and Bernice Maison and Yvette are the others on the variety bill. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH." The "March of Time's" first full-length feature film, adapted from Maj. George Fielding Elliott's celebrated book, opens before a reserved-seat audience Tuesday evening. After the premiere, the run will continue on a regular continuous policy. Until Tuesday evening, "Private Affairs" will continue on the Fifteenth street screen with Roland Young, Hugh Herbert, Nancy Kelly and Robert Cummings. Tonight the pictures of the Jenkins—Armstrong bout will be added to the bill which also includes an "Information, Please," with Wendell Willkie as guest contestant.

Palace

"ANDY HARDY MEETS DEBUTANTE." This latest in the Hardy family series continues into a second week on F street, with Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland providing the central plot of a story which further details the judge's efforts on behalf of the Carvel Orphanage. Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Cecelia Parker, Ann Rutherford, Sara Haden and Diana Lewis are featured.

Metropolitan

"A BILL OF DIVORCEMENT." Maureen O'Hara, Herbert Marshall, Fay Bainter, Patric Knowles, Adolphe Menjou and C. Aubrey Smith have the pivotal parts in the screen's third version of the celebrated Clemence Dane play. The action concerns the plight of a divorced wife whose shell-shocked husband returns home after many years, arriving on the eve of her remarriage. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"NEW MOON." After two weeks at the Palace, this Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy musical film returns to F street. Filmed previously in 1930 with Lawrence Tibbett and Grace Moore in the leads, this Sigmund Romberg operetta tells a story of eighteenth century New Orleans. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"THE BISCUIT EATER." Filmed entirely in Georgia, this new film continues telling of the devotion of two boys for a bird dog whose hunting career is very nearly cut short when he is suspected of being a hunter who eats what he should bring to his master.

Trans-Lux

"ALPINE GARDENS." Plowing time in the Swiss Alps and the Tyrol forms the central short subject of the newsreel house. "Odd Vocations" brings to light some unusual hobbies of the man in the street as well as the Hollywood film star. "The New Pupil" is the "Our Gang" comedy and "Swing Social" is the cartoon. Opens tomorrow morning.

Roadside

"THE FROG." The American premiere of an Edgar Wallace mystery is the latest offering of the Roadside Theater players, opening a two-weeks run Monday evening. Of course, Scotland Yard is in it and among the Roadsiders implicated are George Farrington, Kenn Romney, Maccubin Waters, Edna Evans, Alice Gartrell and William Zuckert. "Sweetbrier," or "The Flower Girl of New York," continues through this Saturday evening.

Cross Roads

"THE SKULL." A chiller-diller in the mirthful manner and set in a deserted chapel is this offering of the Virginia barn players embarking on its second week Monday evening. Gordon Gray, Frances Stuart Dewey, Ted Field, Nancy Hutchison, Rose Edmonds, Hugh O'Boyle, Robert Langley, Rand Gardner and William Draper are the players.

Sylvan

"KISMET," as presented by the Eckington-Roosevelt Players, will be performed a week from tonight on the grassy slope below the Washington Monument, deferring the usual Tuesday festival because of the concert that evening by Leopold Stokowski and his All American Youth Orchestra at the Watergate.

Open-Air

"ALGIERS." Charles Boyer, Hedy Lamarr and Sigrid Gurie return in their popular melodrama of the North African city. Boyer's role is that of Pepe le Moko, the international jewel thief whose safety demands that he remain in the city's Casbah quarter. Opens a three-night run this evening.

Gravel Strike Probe Opened By Grand Jury

6,000 Jobless When 250 Walked Out, Seeking 'Seamen' Classification

The hidden causes of the sand and gravel strike which tied up construction here last week are being sought by antitrust prosecutors who opened a grand jury investigation yesterday.

About 6,000 men were jobless for five days because 250 employes of the Smoot Sand and Gravel Corporation refused to work until they were classified as "seamen" and therefore exempt from the 42-hour-a-week provision of the Wage and Hour Act. Building stopped because the company has a virtual monopoly of the sand and gravel industry here. The strike ended when 60 dredge operators were reclassified as "seamen."

"Bottleneck" Situation

The grand jury investigation will probe for this and other information:

Who fomented the strike and for what motives?

What is the position of the Smoot Company, with reference to the Antitrust Acts?

Assuming the monopoly not to be a law violation, what can be done about the "bottleneck" situation created by one company handling nearly all the sand and gravel for Washington?

Ordered By Arnold

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of the antitrust division, ordered the inquiry. Handling the grand jury work are Walter R. Hutchinson, Lyle L. Jones, Manuel M. Gorman and George S. Robinson.

Rather than impanel a special grand jury, the investigators will present witnesses and records to the regular District grand jury about an hour each day until the work is done. The time required was indefinite.

District N.Y.A. To Get $147,640, Williams Reveals

A total of $147,640 for operation of the National Youth Administration program in the District has been provided in the appropriation for 1940-41, Administrator Aubrey Williams announced yesterday.

The money will be used to provide part-time employment to enable needy students between the ages of 16 and 24 to continue their education.

About one-third of the fund, or $34,105, will be used to aid pupils of secondary schools. The remainder, $113,535, will be used to help college undergraduates and youths engaged in graduate college work.

Secondary school students will earn between $3 and $6 a month, college undergraduates from $10 to $20 a month, and graduate students between $10 and $30 a month. All earnings will vary with the hours worked.

Library Sub Branches To Close for 3 Weeks

Dr. George F. Bowerman, District librarian, yesterday announced that the subbranches at Chevy Chase, Woodridge, Conduit road, Tenley and Eastern High School will be closed from August 12 to September 2.

Summer hours, now in effect, provide for a 4 p. m. Saturday closing at the central library, which is closed all day Sunday, and at 1 p. m. Saturday closing at the major branches. These also are closed all day Sunday. On other days the regular hours of opening from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. are being observed.

Youth Held in $5,000 Bail After Leap Hurts Girl, 17

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

BOY FACES TRIAL—William Stuart (left), lame 16-year-old son of a wealthy woman, enters the courtroom at Harrison, N. Y., to face charges of criminal attack after an automobile ride with Carmella Cupiola, 17 (lower, right), who lay near death in a hospital. Stuart was freed in $5,000 bail placed by his mother, Mrs. Laura Stuart (upper, right). Officials said the youth told them the girl jumped from his car after he had refused to marry her

Police Say Wealthy Boy, 16, Sent Chauffeur Away, Attacked Her in Limousine, Then Told Her He Was 'Too Young' to Marry Her

By the Associated Press

Harrison, N. Y., July 17.—While a 17-year-old daughter of an unemployed stone mason was reported "slightly improved" at a hospital today, authorities postponed for two days the case of a 16-year-old youth accused of criminally assaulting her in his wealthy mother's limousine.

Hospital attaches gace Domenica Carmella Capiola a good chance to recover from injuries when she fell or leaped from the car Monday night after a petting party.

The youth, William Alexander Stuart, was quoted by District Attorney William F. Horan as saying the girl "accepted his advances" and jumped from his moving car when he refused her plea to marry her.

The girl suffered a skull fracture and numerous cuts on the face. Because of her condition, she could not be questioned.

They stopped at several bars and and an amusement park, Horan quoted the boy as saying, and on the way home Stuart ordered the car stopped and the chauffeur got out. Later, as they drove toward the Capiola home, Stuart said, the girl asked him to marry her and he replied that he was "too young for that."

Stuart said a moment later the girl flung open the car door and jumped. The youth summoned his 19-year-old brother and took the girl to a hospital. Yesterday Chief Police Charles W. Conner ordered his arrest on a second-degree rape charge.

The tall, blond boy, who wears a leg brace—the result of a football injury—was released in $5,000 bail. The chauffeur was freed in $200 bail as a material witness.

Stuart appeared before Justice of the Peace Charles C. Venezia today, well dressed and self-composed.

After attorneys representing the youth, the girl and the police department conferred on procedure, Stuart was continued in $5,000 bail until Friday. In the meantime, officials said, they hoped to be able to question the girl.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Perhaps A Half Loaf

The inclusion of a District suffrage plank in the Democratic platform is, of course, very gratifying. Any favorable mention, however vague, is a boost for self-government in Washington. But that is all that can be said at the moment for the proposal offered by Melvin D. Hildreth to the resolutions committee.

The plank, as was forecast earlier in the week, is couched in such broad terms that it does not distinguish between local self-government and the right to vote in national elections. It does not say much to say that: "We favor the extension of suffrage to the people of the District of Columbia."

Representative Randolph, appearing as a witness the day before the plank was submitted, said it was "very, very important" that the District be allowed to vote for President, and outlined alternate plans for District representation in Congress.

If Mr. Randolph's testimony can be taken as an indication that adoption of the plank will spur the movement in Congress to give Washingtonians a voice in their own affairs, that also is vaguely encouraging. But results will still depend on the will of Congress.

Even if the city were granted the right to elect a Senator and a Representative, or two Senators and a proportionate number of Representatives, the record does not encourage the belief that an efficient system of local government would follow. A succession of hard-working leaders in the District committees, as sympathetic to the local cause as our own elected representatives could be, has had no success in efforts to get action on a satisfactory reorganization plan.

What the District needs, much more than permission to vote for Presidents and members of Congress, is a measure of responsible self-government. Until there is indication that Congress is ready to forward this modest ambition there will be no cause for celebration about suffrage prospects.

The Weary Werewolf

Perhaps you have heard about the mysterious and possibly quite ferocious creature, known locally only as "the varmint," which is now being hunted through the jimson weed jungles of the Eastern Shore of Maryland by an armed posse of farmers headed by an intrepid corporal of State police.

These hunters are beset by at least one serious difficulty: none of them has any clear notion of what the thing he is hunting looks like. Already an oversized groundhog has been reported slain by mistake.

From the meager evidence available in the way of tracks and other traces it would appear that the real varmint is something over 4 feet high, weighs about a quarter of a ton, is covered with silky light brown hair and has a total of 14 toes unevenly distributed among his four large feet.

It has been heard in the dead of night giving vent to howls described as the sort to congeal the blood. It has also been heard thumping heavily in the darkness outside farm porches but the brave farm dogs that have gone forth to challenge it have crept back whimpering and painfully scratched. And although the varmint seems not yet to have attacked any human beings, there is no telling when it may and so the farmers before departing for the hunt have given their womenfolk and children stern orders to remain indoors at night.

These rather vague descriptions of the varmint coincide pretty closely with those of the glawakus horrendus which, if you remember, was reported prowling through the countryside in the vicinity of Glastonbury, Conn., about a year and a half ago. The behavior of the beast, if beast it be, seems also strangely similar to the habits of other strange fauna that from time to time turn up in widely separated parts of the country.

Perhaps, then, the glawakus, the varmint and the rest are all one and the same creature. Since nobody has ever had a really good look at him, and since no two of him have been reported at the same time, in any one place, it may be assumed that he is much addicted to celibacy and solitude. His frequent changes of habitat, therefore, might be explained by the fact that he is, like most of us, merely looking for a little peace and quiet.

And the strange howls heard in the night may be no more than his cries of exasperation at discovering he has again had the bad luck to move into an environment where the rural correspondents are beginning to find their news pickings intolerably slim.

Stop, Look, Listen

When the selective service law went into effect, early in the last war, President Wilson announced that it must not be regarded as "a conscription of the unwilling." The phrase recurs to mind in connection with the "draft Roosevelt" movement at Chicago. That certainly cannot be regarded as "a conscription of the unwilling."

The President has in two distinct ways demonstrated his willingness, if not his eagerness, to seek a third term. He refused to withdraw his name at a time when other aspirants might have obtained delegates and otherwise established claims to be regarded as candidates. And by the deliberately obscure statement, delivered in his behalf by Senator Barkley on Tuesday night, Mr. Roosevelt in effect disclosed his ambition for re-election. He has accomplished an adroit and superficially clever political maneuver. But few will call these tactics admirable.

With the single exception of Ulysses S. Grant, whose third-term ambitions were obliterated by a tidal wave of adverse public opinion, every President who confronted this issue, prior to Franklin D. Roosevelt, did so more squarely. Their cue was given by Thomas Jefferson, claimed by the Democrats as the spiritual father of that party. Toward the end of his second term in the Presidential office Mr. Jefferson wrote:

> If the principle of rotation be a sound one, as I conscientiously believe it to be with respect to this office, no pretext should ever be permitted to dispense with it, because there will never be a time when real differences do not exist, and furnish a plausible pretext of dispensation.

In this respect, Franklin D. Roosevelt evidently does not agree with Thomas Jefferson. Having schemed and worked to make his nomination inevitable he will unquestionably find "a plausible pretext" to accept the plum which he has shaken into his outstretched hand. The only obstacle which can now deflect his carefully calculated course is renewed public indorsement of the principle of rotation in the Presidential office. And to this Jeffersonian principle hundreds of thousands of independent voters may be expected to rally.

However, the prejudice against the third term as such is not to be overemphasized. Washington made clear that he refused to consider a second reelection on grounds of personal preference alone. In contrast to Jefferson he maintained that "I can see no propriety in precluding ourselves from the services of any man who in some great emergency shall be deemed universally most capable of serving the public" (as President).

In Mr. Roosevelt's behalf much will be made of Washington's judicial attitude toward the issue of a third term. And it should be frankly said that it is the manner rather than the matter of Mr. Roosevelt's devious approach to another candidacy which is objectionable. His name goes before the Chicago convention only after those of all other aspirants have been deliberately blotted out by the procedure which he has followed. There is no fair test of whether his party really considers him "most capable of serving the public." He has only proved himself most capable of stamping out opposition.

In this revelation of character and temperament, and not in any unreasoning adherence to tradition, lies the strongest argument against letting Mr. Roosevelt's third-term aspirations become effective. It is almost invariably a mistake to award a vital position to a man who goes after it more or less surreptitiously. And one could view the prospect of a third term for Mr. Roosevelt with far less uneasiness if he had long since said outright that he would accept the opportunity and responsibility, instead of sponsoring the current indirect quotation about never having "a desire or purpose" to be renominated.

In an almost prophetic passage in "The American Commonwealth" James Bryce, shrewd student of our institutions, adumbrated the situation which is now crystallizing at Chicago. The possible danger of Presidential tyranny in this country, he wrote, does not lie in the number of terms of office but in the establishment of a popular dictatorship by wholly legal means.

"A bold President who knew himself to be supported by a majority in the country," said Viscount Bryce, "might be tempted to override the law, and deprive the minority of the protection which the law affords it. He might be a tyrant, not against the masses, but with the masses. But nothing in the present state of American politics gives weight to such apprehensions."

In 1893 Mr. Bryce, as he was then, could say with conviction that "nothing in the present state of American politics gives weight to such apprehensions." It is doubtful that he could be so optimistic today.

Many of those who listened to the emotional outburst at Chicago on Tuesday night must have sensed the underlying willingness of that crowd to follow a Fuehrer. The moment is one at which it is well to remember that Hitler achieved dictatorship not by any overt violation of the German Constitution but by adroitly manipulating the popular will to establish himself in a position where he could destroy it.

He Said It

In his Tuesday press conference, President Roosevelt suggested that the interim report issued by the Defense Advisory Commission could be regarded as at least as important as any news that would come out of Chicago.

Those who listened to the convention proceedings over the radio may be inclined to agree, although possibly in a sense not intended by the Chief Executive.

In happier and easier days such collegiate orgies as occurred at the Democratic Convention on Tuesday night could be dismissed as being simply the harmless expression of unrequited adolescence. And before the radio opened the proceedings to all the world it could at least be said of such convention ballyhoo, that the carnival was kept within four walls.

In these critical times there is something fundamentally irresponsible and even tawdry in the spectacle of grown men, entrusted with one of the most responsible of democratic functions, behaving like amateur clowns.

The President was right. What happened at the Democratic Convention on Tuesday night was not the most important news of the day, the more so as nothing surprising happened. From the viewpoint of national welfare the real news, the truly encouraging news, was that the Defense Advisory Commission has been working so hard and well.

During the last 40 days contracts totaling $1,661,891,000 have been let, progress has been made in ending bottlenecks in production, strategic raw materials have been accumulated in encouraging quantities and steps have been taken to meet the labor needs of industry.

The efforts of the Defense Advisory Commission, working without benefit of banners and cheer leaders and keynote speeches, are another and more encouraging manifestation of democracy in action in times which call for action.

Not A Partisan Issue

In his keynote address to the Democratic Convention, Senator Barkley spent considerable time in denouncing the plank in the Republican Party platform which would "fasten upon the New Deal full responsibility for our unpreparedness and for the consequent danger of involvement in war."

Be it said that the Democratic keynoter went a long way effectively to disprove that charge insofar as it applies to acts of omission rather than commission. The Republicans are on very shaky ground when they try to make political capital out of the fact that our Army, Navy and air force are not all they should be in view of existing world circumstances. Senator Barkley gave chapter and verse to prove that the Administration's defense programs were, in the past, repeatedly denounced by leading Republican members of the House and Senate.

However, no rational purpose will be served by any attempt by either party to make the problem of defense an issue in the campaign. Neither party is particularly blameless and neither one can be held clearly responsible for the present state of our military and naval preparations. What is needed today is not recrimination over the past but nonpartisan effort to make the United States as invulnerable to attack as our resources permit.

Republicans as well as Democrats should agree with Senator Barkley when he said of defense that: "It ought not to be a partisan question."

Today's pome, by any husband: "A thousand times you've told me that, and now I cannot bear it—if really nothing you've to wear, please go ahead and wear it."

A radio comic, charged with purloining gags, pleaded "unconscious plagiarism." The "unconscious" part sounds plausible.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

English and French race horses, refugees from Europe's war, are winning handsome prizes on American tracks. Moscow II, for example, galloped to a $62 victory the other day at Chicago's Arlington Park. He is one of several foreign-bred horses stabled at that track by Joseph E. Widener. No difficulty was met in bringing these animals into the United States. No means test was applied.

Children from the war-torn countries are another matter. Although groups like the American Association of University Women stand ready to receive them, these innocent victims of war's bestiality must await their chances under an immigration quota law that has lost all meaning in the face of the present international situation.

However, children cannot be expected to win $62 races.

British Children

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your Dorothy Thompson column of today you published a long harangue, ostensibly addressed to a Senator, lobbying for the purpose of having the United States send its ships into the war area and relieve Britain of the support and maintenance of their minors in aid of that belligerent. As usual here of late, Miss Thompson displays her hysteria by a half-baked plan to save the world. Just suppose her clamor is assented to by the Senate. Then, having undertaken the responsibility of bringing the British children over here, what next? Just a few weeks ago Dorothy was sure America was to be invaded within a mere matter of months: then where would we send the children?

Also, what about the French children? A month ago she was all for giving everything to La Belle France. Doesn't she want to take the French children away from Hitler? Again, the irrepressible young lady has taken sides definitely in the Chinese war. It would no doubt be helpful to bring all the Chinese kiddies over and nourish them pending hostilities in Asia. Britain has more land than we have out of immediate danger; China has not.

Miss Thompson and others sympathetic toward little children and able to do so might very well bend their energies toward helping the poor undernourished little Americans, and it would not take an ocean voyage to find them.

The Third Term

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In order to "save democracy" certain New Dealers have maintained that it will be necessary for Mr. Roosevelt to defy the third term tradition and run again. Since when has this great Nation become dependent on any single individual to save something? According to this line of ridiculous reasoning the country will be "lost" if F. D. R. is removed from the political picture.

Such political poppycock, promoted by self-seeking officeholders or hero worshipers, is hardly calculated to impress or influence true Americans in any party. No "deal," new or old, can be perpetuated under our form of government. Sooner or later, when the cards are reshuffled, a fresh and different "game" gets under way.

When, and if, our Nation is forced to rely on any man in order to carry on successfully true democracy will be dead and the specter of a dictatorship darken our horizons.

Benevolent State

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: In Spain 500 years ago, July, 1440, instead of July, 1940, imagine the futility of sending to literary strongholds letters designed to cast discredit upon the theory of a flat earth. In July, 1940, it may be as foolish to send to literary strongholds of the United States letters designed to cast discredit upon the theory of the benevolent state.

The benevolent state is not aligned with that benevolence which Jesus exalted as a measure of the human individual's own free will. The state constitutes an enforcement agency and the benevolent state therefore constitutes the exaction of benevolence by force from some people for other people. The disciples of the benevolent state are in control of the convention which is convening this week.

The Code Napoleon

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of July 12, on the French constitutions, you say: "There was the code Napoleon under which France was ruled during the first empire"—leaving the implication that the code lasted no longer. The fact is that the code, still in force and highly revered by the French people, has proved to be the most permanent codification of private law in France and probably in any country. Promulgated in 1804, it has outlived all the dynasties and regimes which have since waxed and waned in France and is but 15 years the junior of our own Federal Constitution.

Not only so, but the code Napoleon is the forerunner and model of most similar instruments throughout the world. Out of some 40 civil codes now in force, the great majority received their inspiration, and much of their plan and substance, from the code Napoleon.

Its imperial originator said: "I shall go down in history with the code in my hand," and history has confirmed his prediction. Not even in this hour of France's greatest misfortune and disaster, not a voice has been raised, so far as I have noted, against the code. Should this latest of many brief regimes attempt to scrap it, France would lose its highest claim to leadership in the legal world.

Airplane Motors

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Packard Co. has agreed to manufacture 9,000 airplane motors—two-thirds for Britain and one-third for America. This larger amount so as to lessen costs and make production easier—so our news stories inform us.

This reason is perfectly valid. Certainly large-scale production cuts down on costs. But if American defenses are so in need of building up, are so inadequate and will take months and months to be raised to a safe level why aren't all 9,000 motors made for the United States? The President and his defense advisers claim we do need all this vast additional material. Then why are they willing to see a definite slow-up in our own defense plans by allotting two-thirds of that produced to Britain?

This makes me stop to think about the sincerity and validity of our so-called "defense" program, and ask why we are so eager to arm Britain even though these same officials proclaim our own imminent danger because of lack of adequate defense.

Carl Droop

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Carl Droop passed recently at his estate, Bluemont, Va.

Among artists and musicians of Washington he will be sadly missed.

Sturdy in essential traits, devoted to home and family, a good friend with ready smile and wit, generous in civic charities, genial, considerate to those in his employ, a sensitive lover of music, books, pictures, Carl Droop evolved a well-rounded and admirable man, touching a community generously and humanly.

For a lovable personality memory and affection will linger.

Directories

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On January 7 The Post carried a story on its front page to the effect that the map carried in the January, 1940, Congressional Directory for the State of Delaware had an error in it. This morning I received my first glance at the new June, 1940, Congressional Directory and I find that this error has been corrected. I wish to thank Senator Townsend and Representative Williams, of Delaware, the Joint Committee on Printing, and especially The Washington Post for correcting this mistake. I could have beefed from now to doomsday by myself and nothing would probably have ever been done about it without the help of these persons and organizations. Improvement though could still be made in the Congressional Directory, which really amounts to a directory for the entire Federal Government. A year ago the directory showed the location and names of the State capitals in the State congressional district maps. These State capitals are no longer shown. I think that a return to the old way in this would be an improvement. Also, on page one we find the word "biographical." Actually this should be "autobiographical" as the members of Congress themselves write their own sketches of their lives—or else refuse to write them at all! These are only a few of the suggestions I have for improving this greatest single volume of representative democratic government on the face of this earth. The Washington Post should editorially ask for suggestions for improvements of this directory. Only by such dynamic steps can democracy ever be saved and be made to flourish!

Wheeler And Peace

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Senator Wheeler sounded a very true and interesting note in a statement on the peace plank of the Democratic National Committee. In emphatically maintaining that the Democratic Party must be a party of peace, the Senator said " . . . in every war both parties always deny that they are fighting a war of aggression. This last war was a European war before we got into it, and then, of course, it was our war."

Quite ably and amply the Senator has answered President Roosevelt's statement to Congress of last week that "we will not use our arms in a war of aggression; we will not send our boys to fight in European wars."

In 1914-18 both sides claimed they were fighting for a noble and just cause. Of course, the side whose cause we espoused, the Allied, was the only just side as far as our propaganda and war-mongering forces were concerned. Today, we see a dangerous repetition of the same propaganda and drive to our entry in the war. Thus, in 1916, America was eventually in a European war, which then became our war, as Senator Wheeler points out.

The President's statement, which on the surface sounds reassuring enough, becomes mere words when subjected to analysis based on historical facts. Especially is this true when we consider the most recent moves of the Roosevelt Administration in connection with the foreign war and a so-called defense program. It's rather difficult to take the President's statement at face value when he indorses all aid to one of the belligerents, compulsory military training, and billions for "defense."

The Post Impressionist

First Prize

Hobe's girl was one of those big blue-eyed Danish girls, so it was only natural that we called her the Great Dane.

Hobe was down to cover the World Series and the Great Dane had met him at the station with a list of places to go and things to see. In his own home town, Hobe hasn't needed a list for 22 years, but in alien territory it was welcomed.

After the first game was in the history books and Hobe had written his usual fine piece, the Great Dane called him up and asked him if baseball had crowded her out of his heart. Hobe said no—that he had a big heart and there was a place for both. The Great Dane countered with a suggestion that if his heart was so big, maybe the expense account was in keeping, and anyhow, she wanted to go to the Silver Club that evening.

"Never heard of it," said Hobe, who instinctively figured that a place with the name Silver would require some silver to see.

"Why," said the Great Dane, "it's the smartest place in town."

Hobe prided himself on being smart. He knew the Great Dane had him.

At precisely 11:40, Hobe, with the Great Dane on his arm, entered the Silver Club. Back in his home town, Hobe knew everybody and what's more important, everybody knew Hobe, but in this strange World Series town, he was just another visiting fireman as far as the headwaiters were concerned.

Hobe's table was not what he had hoped. The Great Dane, however, thought it was wonderful.

Wine flowed, sweet music wafted the air-conditioned Silver Club, the lush om-pahs of the bass horn paced the time, and the Great Dane was having the time of her life.

Hobe took the Silver Club in stride, danced a few dances, had a couple of highballs with some of the boys who dropped by his table, tried to talk baseball with the Great Dane and finally, at 2:15 a. m. suggested it was time that the Great Dane was home in bed.

"Anyhow," he said, "I got to work tomorrow."

"Work," sneered the Great Dane, "you call watching a World Series work?"

Followed one of those too-trite-to-baseball-writers arguments about what's work and what isn't.

Finally at 3:12 a. m. when the music was getting wild and the Great Dane was threatening to abandon her slow dancing style for her interpretation of the shag, Hobe blew the whistle.

"Regardless of what you're going to do," he said, "I'm going to my hotel."

The Great Dane saw he meant it. She promised to leave—quietly.

Hobe called for the bill, fearing the worst. He was right. The check was $23. In his own habitat, Hobe would have raised a squawk, but he knew he was in the land of the stranger.

Grudgingly, he paid it.

Hobe hadn't planned to spend anything like that on the first night of the series. Why, suppose the thing lasted only four games, how'd he ever make the expense account tally with a $23 slug on the first night? Anyhow, he figured he hadn't bought $23 worth of anything, hadn't heard $23 worth of music, hadn't danced $23 worth of dancing. It was just one of those things.

A great believer in getting his money's worth, Hobe cast about the Silver Club for something to balance the books. He didn't like the silver, because it wasn't silver, for one thing. The tablecloth was soiled—it was that Planter's Punch the Great Dane had upset. The palm trees were too big. He liked that tenor saxophone, but he figured the guy would have put up a fight and even saxophone players will fool you—sometimes.

Hobe shrugged his shoulders and got up.

"Come along," he said to the Great Dane. She came—quietly.

As they started down the long, plush-lined corridor that led to the glittering street entrance of the Silver Club, Hobe's wandering eye fell on a fetching piece of pottery.

Changing his and the Great Dane's course, he moved over toward it. Boldly, he reached out, picked the piece of pottery off its ebony base and stuck it under his arm—the one that wasn't entwined in the Great Dane's. This, he figured, would square up his account with the Silver Club.

Hobe is no fool. He realized that when night clubs leave pieces of pottery around they either have them anchored down, or there's someone to watch them. Out of the corner of his eye he watched for a watcher. Sure enough here he came—a boy in blue—probably the man off the beat.

Hobe knew it was time for fast action or fast thinking. Maybe both. The officer was about ten feet behind him.

"Wait a minute," said Hobe to the Great Dane.

They stopped.

"Life," said Hobe to his girl in a voice you could hear on the curb, "is a funny thing."

The Great Dane nodded.

"Here we are," said Hobe, "just you and me. You wanted to come to this club tonight, and I'll be frank with you, I didn't."

The Great Dane didn't know what he was getting at, but she played the act dumb—which wasn't hard.

"You wanted to come and I didn't," said Hobe, "and what happens? We come here."

"Yes?" said the Great Dane.

Out of his eye Hobe saw the officer had stopped and was listening.

"We come against my wishes," said Hobe," and by George I win first prize."

He juggled the piece of pottery. "Ain't it a beauty?" he said, walking off.

Out of his eye he saw the officer turn and walk away in the opposite direction. The books were balanced.

Hobe still has the pottery. It's one of his proudest possessions—his and the Great Dane's.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

From Chicago

THESE LINES are written before seeing the platform, without knowing for certain whether Mr. Roosevelt will accept the nomination, or how he will accept it if, as now seems so likely, he does accept it, and without knowing the name of the Vice Presidential candidate. I feel as if I were writing the review of a play which I have not yet seen, and that if I do not look out I shall be trying to assemble words which will seem equally appropriate no matter whether the play is the tragedy of Hamlet or the Comedy of Errors. My only consolation is that there are others here in Chicago who are in a worse predicament, namely the authors of the platform and the writers of keynote speeches. They, poor wretches, have to pretend to say important things which will not look preposterous when and if they are remembered and recited back at them in August, in September, in October.

But even if I were to assume that the obvious is going to happen, that of course, Mr. Roosevelt is going to accept and that the platform will, of course, mean everything in general and nothing in particular, I nevertheless wish I did not have to write this article. For here in Chicago all that one sees is a little of the machinery by which a great spectacle is being staged. The spectacle itself cannot be seen here in Chicago. That is to say it is impossible as yet to know whether the people will think that Mr. Roosevelt's friends have arranged his renomination by out-maneuvering the opposition or that the people will think that the arrangements, the devices, the maneuvers are merely the means by which the inevitable has been brought to pass. It will be easier to form a sound opinion on this crucial question when we have all gone home. Until then we shall do well not to jump to easy conclusions.

THE DEMOCRATS have already put on a striking exhibition of how partisanship can blind men to the realities. They have decided, it appears, to treat the Willkie candidacy as something manufactured by the utilities companies and to pretend that there is no popular movement behind Willkie. They do not really believe this. But they have launched their campaign on the pretense that they do believe it. They will soon discover how wrong they are, and that a campaign against Willkie pitched at the demagogic level of Senator Barkley's speech will prove to be a boomerang. For it will provoke the resentment of great masses of honest and patriotic citizens. These citizens know that they are not the tools of "Insull" and they will not listen patiently when they are told that they are.

The Republicans are, it appears, set to make a similar mistake about another Roosevelt nomination. They are tempted to pretend that the third-term tradition has been broken without serious opposition from within the Democratic Party by the intrigue of a small group of designing men. Almost certainly that will not be true. There has been intrigue and there are designing men around Mr. Roosevelt as there are around all other public men. But it will be safer to assume that their designs would have failed, that the intrigue would have miscarried, were it not for the indubitable fact that Mr. Roosevelt has the largest popular following of any man of his party, that in fact no other Democrat has any real popular following. Though I think myself that Mr. Roosevelt would have been wise to refuse the nomination, and that his renunciation would have served the highest interests of the Nation, that opinion does not alter the fact that he is the first choice, there is no second choice, of millions of voters. And that, at the bottom of everything, is the real reason why the convention will nominate him for a third term.

ANY OTHER nomination but Willkie at Philadelphia, any other nomination but Roosevelt at Chicago, would have made this election a contest of party machines. These two nominations will make it a contest of popular movements led by the two most gifted natural popular leaders in public life today.

There can be no doubt that such a contest is proof of the vitality of the democratic process in this country. But it must be evident to Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie and to all disinterested citizens, that a contest of this character may easily and quickly degenerate into a fierce conflict which will divide the people dangerously. For no serious attempt will be made by their supporters to keep the conflict within the bounds of decency and truth: that was already evident at Philadelphia, and it is entirely evident here. The temptation will be almost irresistible to shape the contest as a class struggle, and the only men who can prevent this calamity are Mr. Willkie and Mr. Roosevelt. Theirs is the responsibility, and neither will be fit for the office of President if he does not at once and then persistently, clearly and loudly and continually, clamp down on his managers, his spellbinders and himself against the overwhelming temptation to make this a campaign of disgusting and destructive demagogy.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Chicago Stench

Chicago, July 17.

MEETING, as they are, under the auspices of as foul a gang of corruptioneers as ever mocked the name of civic decency, it was fitting that the orgies of the party of humanity should be blessed with a hymn sung by an artist recruited for this honor from one of the more pretentious dumps of the convention city. Mr. Harry Richman's golden voice pealed out over the rites at the Chicago stadium in the stirring words and music of "God Bless America," by the kind co-operation of the Chez Paree, a sometime gambling house and place of privilege in the underworld administration of Chicago.

The selection seemed particularly choice. Mr. Richman, of course, is only an artist and no politician, and artists nowadays, perforce, must seek their public in joints having proper credentials from the political rulers and the mobs. The theater, having been done to death by the extortions and stink bombs of Willie Bioff and other luminaries of the A. F. of L., and the liquor rights having been generously allotted to racketeers, the singer, the dancer and those wags known as masters of ceremonies are driven again, as long ago, to dumps and dives to earn their humble living.

As to whether the artist so happily selected to inflame the finer instincts of the party of humanity feels at ease in the surroundings of Chicago's most elegant joint, how can one know except by remembering that when he was joined in holy wedlock in Miami Beach a few years ago the guests who gathered to snap at his vittles included that most illustrious all-Chicago roster of criminals, now that Al Capone has gone emeritus, Mr. Frank Nitti?

ONE WORKS where one must in the arts these days, and it may be said that one sometimes must work in some pretty low dumps, but for one's nuptial guests one may select one's friends. Mr. Richman's friendship on that occasion embraced this leader of the criminal scum which drifts luxuriously from Chicago and New York to the Miamis and Saratoga, according to the season—but he may have been only a business friend, even so.

However, that the Chez Paree should be represented at the Democratic convention was eminently proper, all adjacent facts considered. For bear in mind that Mr. Jake Arvey, the second man in the local political gang which is host to the party of humanity, is a noted patron of the arts discoursed in the opera hard by the craps tables and the chancy wheels of the playroom. Mr. Arvey is little known outside Chicago and Illinois, but on his home grounds he is a man to be cultivated and placated if not feared. For he is mighty in the machine of that rich and pious lover of humanity, Mayor Ed Kelly, the boss of the Chicago mob, whose rise to riches on a modest salary in humanity's service proves that virtue is not Virtue's sole reward.

TWICE A YEAR Mr. Arvey holds rejoicing with the lower-case servants of humanity who run his ward for him. In summer these humbler toilers around the polls, the courts and the gambling joints rejoice in some leafy dell, but in winter, in both the literal and the colloquial sense, they go to town and hold reunion at the Chez Paree.

These exercises, in a modest way, are Mr. Jake Arvey's Nobel prize ceremonies. With his loyal workers gathered about him he bestows approval, honor and power on the more successful humanitarians of the mob, and on those who have been caught stealing ballots, stuffing the polls or at other harmless mischief, his sympathy and inspiring spirit.

The genius of the Chez Paree is Mr. Mike Fritzel, a landmark in the arts and entertainments of Chicago, who recalls with pride and a slight seeming of nostalgia his pioneer days in an earlier and more forthright dump on West Madison street, known by the incredible name of Arsonia Cafe.

The Arsonia, friends, was a dump that was a dump, and Mr. Fritzel has brought to the esthetic life of present-day Chicago, in the place which is the esthetic capital of the Kelly-Arvey Machine talents undimmed by the many years between.

SO, NOT ONLY was it fitting that the blessing on the party of humanity should be sung by an artist from the favorite indoor relaxing joint of Mr. Arvey's loyal and resourceful hosts of the polling place but it was equally correct that the prenomination speech for President Roosevelt, which jumped the gun by many hours, should have been pronounced by Mayor Kelly himself. Premature his tribute may have been, and slightly out of manners to the other Democrats on hand, but this rich and humane servant of humankind, like his fellow crusader for purity in Government, Frank Hague, of Jersey City, is on a bit of a speck if not/a spot.

Last winter Frank Murphy, then Attorney General of the United States of America, was solemnly vowing to fumigate Chicago and Jersey City and to send to prison all servants of humanity caught in flagrant dereliction. Mr. Murphy then was kicked upstairs to the United State Supreme Court, and a reign of tolerance or, in a lovelier word, humanity, set in at the Department of Justice.

If he is not to be embarrassed in his humane works Mr. Kelly had better elect Mr. Roosevelt for a third term, and so the delegates heard him acclaim the President as "that God-sent guardian of our liberties," including, you may be sure, the liberties of many members of the mob who might be deprived of theirs by sentence of the court under the Presidency of Wendell Willkie.

Only he and his Maker can know what was in Mr. Kelly's heart when he indulged in public adoration of President Roosevelt. But, taking one consideration with another, one may frame a guess as to what was in his mind.

Quezon And Aguinaldo

By Vicente Albano Pacis

Old Patriot Restored To Favor

Special Correspondence Of The Post

Manila.

GEN. EMILIO AGUINALDO, the Phillippines' No. 1 living patriot but long a forgotten man, has once more regained his rightful place, but not until Manuel L. Quezon, President of the Commonwealth, extended him the glad hand.

Observers see in the Aguinaldo-Quezon reconciliation an inevitable political deal: Aguinaldo may become a Senator by grace of Quezon and his party, and Quezon may be reelected President with the active help of Aguinaldo. The only weak spot of this conjecture is that both could be elected for the positions indicated without each other's help and, perhaps, even against each other's opposition.

It was nearly two decades ago that the two became alienated. Gen. Leonard Wood was Governor General. He assumed office after some eight years of Francis Burton Harrison who, according to Wood and a former Governor General, W. Cameron Forbes, extended autonomy to the Filipinos so fast that they were swamped in politics. Wood lost no time in applying the indicated remedy—make the Filipinos disgorge some of their autonomy. Quezon, being headman at the time as now, inevitably became Dr. Wood's most important guinea pig.

It was at this juncture that Aguinaldo made the fatal slip. While Quezon was squirming in Dr. Wood's laboratory, Aguinaldo rather enjoyed the spectacle. In fact, he went as far as to lavish praises upon Wood, whereupon Quezon distracted attention from the issue raised by the Wood experiment by staging one of the bitterest political feuds against Aguinaldo.

Aguinaldo, he alleged, never fought a battle. Having been deceived by the Americans—Aguinaldo naively insisted they promised to help him set up an independent Philippine government—he engineered the insurrection but did nothing but to retreat until he was captured by Col. Funston in the wilds of northern Luzon. One of the first acts of the Philippine government under Quezon was to abolish Aguinaldo's pension of 12,000 pesos a year, financially embarrassing him.

ENTERING INTO the knock-down-and-drag-out spirit of the feud, Aguinaldo was never himself short of fulminations. He claimed Quezon was a better cook than a soldier and had had no assignment better than kitchen police duty. "Even so," the general reminisced, "he was a bad cook!" He then charged Quezon with having been an opportunist and of having enriched himself in politics to the tune of $3,000,000.

Completely different was the scene the other day when, on the occasion of the celebration by Aguinaldo's veterans of the anniversary of the proclamation of independence by Aguinaldo in defiance of the Americans, Quezon appeared at the Luneta and publicly shook Aguinaldo's hand. The historic handshake started a series of events and speculations.

Quezon, at the time, was campaigning for the approval of the proposed amendments to the Philippines constitution. One of the three amendments provides for the creation of a two-chamber legislature in place of the present unicameral National Assembly. Another provides for the repeal of the prohibition against Presidential reelection and specifically frees Quezon from it. It may now look more than suspicious if Aguinaldo's pension should be restored, but why should not the same purpose be accomplished by making him Senator and at the same time giving him a new place of honor.

Not that, with an adequate organization—which he or anyone else except Quezon does not have—Aguinaldo could not be elected Senator on his own merits. Although Quezon defeated him for President, he is still sufficiently beloved by the people to land one of the 24 senatorships.

BUT SENATORS are to be elected at large throughout the country; each candidate has to muster all the votes he can get out of the total of 2,750,000 registered voters. This simply means that a candidate, provided he is otherwise acceptable, has to be officially nominated in Manila and his candidacy actively promoted by a party with a truly national organization. Only the Nationalist Party of which Quezon is head, has such an organization. The long and the short of it is that only this party will be able to elect Senators.

Aguinaldo's part of the bargain, according to reports, is that he would help work for the approval of the amendments in the Philippines and in Washington, and probably support Quezon's reelection. If this is true, he has fulfilled the first part of the bargain. In Cavite, his bailiwick, the Presidential reelection amendment was approved, although all the other amendments were disapproved by the electorate.

That Quezon will be available in some way or another, if Roosevelt approves the amendments, is now a practical certainty. Although he himself has declared publicly that he is not a candidate but will serve if reelected, his supporters, fully one and a half years before the next Presidential election, have already launched his candidacy.

Declared Quezon's leading organ editorially after the plebiscite: "The move to draft the President for a second term must be considered as a logical follow-up to the approval, in particular, of the amendment permitting the reelection of the President." It urged that since Quezon is only reluctantly receptive, a bill pending in the Assembly providing that the party may file the certificate of candidacy instead of the candidate be immediately enacted into law.

Money

We favor money. We consider it a good thing, even if the wrong people seem to have it. We are glad there is a little left and promise to do what we can about preserving it in the usual colors.

Military

We are for conscription, with the distinct understanding that it mustn't be used in case of war; and we are for the adequate defense of the United States up to the point where it entails discomfort, inconvenience or a disarrangement of routine. We do not think anybody should be asked to defend the country more than 40 hours a week. We condemn those selfish Americans who would ask a man to defend his country on Saturdays and Sundays.

Prohibition

We think it should be repealed. It has gone far enough, and we are glad somebody has brought the matter to our attention. Our answer to people who say prohibition was repealed years ago is that nobody can convince us of that with a small glass of beer still costing 15 cents.

Foreign Policy

We pledge ourselves to clear up the sinking of the Maine; we commend the heroism of Richard Hobson; we denounce Admiral Montojo, and we demand the extinction of "Butch" Weyler. We pledge ourselves to do our part in putting down the Boxer Rebellion, short of putting down the Boxer Rebellion, and we are extending every aid to the Boers, short of aid. We indorse the Monroe Doctrine, the one-over-one system, and the white strip on automobile highways.

Peace

We take a firm stand for peace, and believe this can best be accomplished by the abolition of automobile horns, sirens on fire apparatus and loud speakers on sound wagons. We believe a leading cause of conflict in this country is the competition to obtain low and distinctive automobile markers.

Agriculture

We are for everything in agriculture except cucumbers. We believe there is too much lettuce produced in this country, and that too many restaurant men use it as a substitute for meat. We favor fewer roller-skating derbies near farms. We think too many farmhouses are advertising antiques for sale.

Tariff, Economics, Public Health

We are for a longer interval between the stop and go sign; we are for fewer colored pumps in gasoline stations; we are for larger cups on putting greens; we think too many flavors are being used in ice cream, and we are for fewer detours. We condemn paper towels, straw sandals and women's hats in general. We condemn the three-decker sandwich in all forms. We are opposed to cannibalism.

Taxation

Miscellaneous

We condemn oversized 3-cent stamps; we think vitamins are getting too much emphasis; we favor Federal limitation of quiz programs, and we think that what America needs more than anything else is a good cup of coffee for a nickel.

Insomnia

The final feline riot wanes, the mournful mutts are mute,
And now nocturnal quiet reigns, unbroken, absolute;
The ultimate drunk has vanished in the milkman's rumbling wake . . .

Strange Document

By Mark Sullivan

Indirect Discourse Of Mr. Barkley

CHICAGO, JULY 17.—President Roosevelt's first statement to the convention, the one which started the machinery of nomination, will figure in history as an extraordinary document. About any statement by any man, any letter he writes, there are two questions. One is, what did the statement mean? Usually that is easy, unless the words are deliberately cryptic.

The other question is often more difficult to answer, and usually more important to know. This question is: Why does the man make the statement? What incidents preceded it? What went on in his mind? Who was in conference with him immediately before? What impelled him to speak? What effect did he intend to accomplish by his statement? The answer to these questions are the true history; they are the story behind the superficial documents of record.

With respect to the strange statement President Roosevelt sent to the convention just before the final drive to renominate him, the facts about motive are not known. It is not known whether the idea occurred to himself, or was suggested to him, by a message from his lieutenants in Chicago, or by some one with him in Washington. But these answers will some day be known. I suspect the New Dealers who compose Mr. Roosevelt's intimate circle are industrious diary-keepers.

ANYHOW, HERE is the way the President's statement came to Chicago: For days, ever since the delegates began to arrive, the convention had stewed in a simmer of something like sullenness. They knew they were going to nominate Mr. Roosevelt, and they had no joy in it. The one vital personality in the convention, and the one who had the delegates' real affection was Mr. Farley—and Mr. Farley was opposed to a third term. The New Deal lieutenants of Mr. Roosevelt who were here directing the work of getting him nominated were not well known. There were mutterings, not of preventing renomination, for that could not be, but of doing it sourly. An ancient resolution of the Democratic Party, disapproving third terms, had been dug up; and there were rumors it would be reintroduced in this convention, with acrimonious results. Three sessions of the convention had passed with not more than a half minute of applause for Mr. Roosevelt.

Then, suddenly, late Tuesday, came an announcement from Washington, saying that late that night a statement by Mr. Roosevelt would be made to the convention; it would be read by Senator Barkley, at the end of his own formal speech.

Instantly, Chicago became alert with anticipation. Not only Chicago but the country. Radio programs were interrupted to inject, with a manner of excitement, the announcement that at last Mr. Roosevelt was going to state his position on the third term.

AS THE EVENING session of the convention began, the galleries were crowded; there was tension in the atmosphere. Senator Barkley's set speech would come first. It would be the prelude to what was to follow. After Mr. Barkley had spoken a few minutes, he interjected into his speech a mention of Mr. Roosevelt, which was not in the previously prepared copy given out to the newspapermen.

This interjection may or may not have been a part of a pepped-up stage management, and may or may not have been related to the statement from Mr. Roosevelt that was to be made later. It may be the Roosevelt managers had taken account of the dearth of applause for Mr. Roosevelt in previous sessions and had decided to work up some enthusiasm. In any event, the mention of Mr. Roosevelt's name was followed by a demonstration of the usual convention sort. As such demonstrations go, this one was neither under nor over the average.

The demonstration tapered down. The delegates settled back in their seats. Senator Barkley resumed his speech, hurrying noticeably, for it was desirable to get to the statement from Mr. Roosevelt before the radio listeners went to bed. To an audience rather impatiently waiting, Mr. Barkley uncoiled his peroration. Then he turned to the Presidential statement, for which his own speech had been reduced to the status of prelude.

EVERYBODY—almost literally everybody, I think—had supposed the President's statement would be something dramatic, portentous. It was a surprise therefore, almost a shock, when it turned out the statement was not even to be in the President's own words. It was to be one of those "indirect discourse" statements, such as Mr. Roosevelt sometimes puts out in the words of a secretary or spokesman.

The President has never had and has not today any desire or purpose to continue in the office of President, to be a candidate for that office, or to be nominated by the convention for that office. He wishes in all earnestness and sincerity to make it clear that all of the delegates to this convention are free to vote for any candidate."

Why was that statement made? A common guess is that it was made on the urging of Mr. Roosevelt's lieutenants here in Chicago as part of their effort to make the nomination as near as possible to acclamation or unanimity. It amounted to saying to the delegates: "You are free to nominate anyone you choose, but you know as well as I do that it isn't practicable to nominate anyone else now."

At once the convention speeded up what it had to do. The hour of making the nomination was advanced a day. It was all, I think, an effort to jerk the event out of its spirit of sag.

Parties' Foreign Policy, Defense Planks Compared

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 17.—Here is a comparison of some Republican and Democratic platform statements on foreign policy and defense:

DEMOCRAT	REPUBLICAN
Foreign Wars
We will not participate in foreign wars, and we will not send our Army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside of the Americas, except in case of attack.	The Republican Party is firmly opposed to involving this Nation in foreign war.
Aid to Foreign Nations
We pledge to extend to these (liberty-loving peoples wantonly attacked) all the material aid at our command, consistent with law and not inconsistent with the interests of our own national defense.	We favor the extension to all peoples fighting for liberty, or whose liberty is threatened, of such aid as shall not be in violation of international law or inconsistent with the requirements of our own national defense.
Defense
We favor and shall rigorously enforce and defend the Monroe Doctrine . . . We propose to provide America with an invincible air force, a Navy strong enough to protect all our seacoasts and our national interests, and a fully equipped and mechanized Army.	We declare for the prompt, orderly and realistic building of our national defense to the point at which we shall be able not only to defend the United States, its possessions, and essential outposts from foreign attack, but also efficiently to uphold in war the Monroe Doctrine.
Charge and Countercharge
For years our President has warned the Nation that organized assaults against religion, democracy and international good faith threatened our own peace and security. Men blinded by partisanship brushed aside these warnings as war-mongering and officious intermeddling. . . . It is a tribute to the President's foresight and action that our defense forces are today at the peak of their peacetime effectiveness.	The present national Administration has already spent for all purposes more than $54,000,000,000 . . . and yet by the President's own admission we are still wholly unprepared to defend our country. We fasten upon the New Deal full responsibility for our unpreparedness and for the consequences of involvement in war.

Republican Song Is Theme For Democratic Convention

By James D. Secrest

If the Nation's voters are to be influenced in their November balloting by the campaign songs of the Republicans and the Democrats, their choice is going to be difficult.

The news leaked out yesterday that the Democrats apparently have stolen the G. O. P. campaign song without knowing it belongs to the Republicans. The song is "God Bless America."

Officials at the headquarters of the Republican National Committee appeared undisturbed over the fact that the Democrats have sung Irving Berlin's song at almost every session of the Chicago convention.

"It's just a sign of the times," commented Franklyn Waltman, jr., G. O. P. publicity chief.

"We feel confident that a great many Democrats will be singing the Republican campaign song before the campaign is over."

Following the nomination of Wendell Willkie, Irving Berlin offered the song, popularized by Kate Smith, to the Republican National Committee and waived his rights to it for the duration of the campaign.

Writing to Samuel F. Pryor, jr., vice chairman of the G. O. P. committee, Berlin said:

"Nothing will please me more than to have you use my song in your campaign for Wendell Willkie."

While the Republican National Committee has never formally adopted the song, the G. O. P. headquarters issued a press release which implied that the song would be used as a party rallying theme.

Harry Richman, night club entertainer, has sung "God Bless America" frequently at Chicago and has induced delegates to join in the chorus. It has been the only song that has had any of the earmarks of a campaign song.

The incident recalled that some Republican faces were red in Philadelphia when someone pointed out that "Ballad for Americans," which was sung at the opening G. O. P. session, was a hangover from the Federal WPA Theater project.

9 Pct. Allotted To Subscriptions In U. S. Bond Sale

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau jr. announced yesterday that subscriptions to the $600,000,000 of 2¼ per cent bonds, offered publicly were allotted 9 per cent, on a straight percentage basis, with adjustments, where necessary, to the $100 denomination.

The allotment does not affect subscriptions in amounts up to and including $5,000, totaling about $39,000,000, where the subscribers specified that delivery be made in registered bonds 90 days after the issue date. These were allotted in full.

Morgenthau revealed that according to reports received from the Federal Reserve Banks' total subscriptions to the issue offered publicly were $6,609,000,000.

Red Cross Sets Membership Drive Sept. 23 to Oct. 17

Washington's twenty-fourth Red Cross Roll Call will be conducted from September 23 to October 17, Edgar Morris, general chairman of the drive, announced last night.

Morris emphasized that this year's membership campaign, of "vital importance to the District Chapter," should not be confused with the recent war relief campaign

"Although demands on the District Chapter's personnel and resources in the coming year are certain to be compelling, the people of Washington must not lose sight of the fact that their Red Cross organization will continue to devote major attention to alleviating and preventing suffering and injury in this city," Morris declared.

Films' Best (Worst) Meany Here

Brian Donlevy (left), Miss Goluem Ketchum, of Charlottesville, Va., and J. E. Fontaine, head of the Paramount film exchange here, lunch at the Carlton

By Gerald G. Gross

TWO stars in their respective fields brushed elbows at 2:50 p. m. yesterday in the entrance of the Carlton Hotel. But they neither recognized nor spoke to each other.

"That's Secretary Hull," someone whispered to Brian Donlevy, screen villain, as the Cabinet member stepped into his limousine.

"Hm-m, his face looked familiar," said the despicable "heavy" of "Union Pacific," "Barbary Coast," "Beau Geste" and any number of other films.

Actors frequently turn out, in real life, to be altogether unlike the parts they play. The comedian is a sulky individual, the tear-jerker goes around playing practical jokes, the sweet young ingenue cusses like a sailor.

BUT Donlevy, well Donlevy doesn't behave villainously out of greasepaint but a blue phrase issues from the side of his mouth occasionally and he employs a diabolic leer that makes one glance about for a clear aisle to the nearest exit.

"Aw, I'm fed up with villain roles," he said. "Why, it's reached the point where people write to ask if I kick my dog."

Long ago he began trying to get away from roles in which he starts the day by kicking a child in the teeth, works up a lunch appetite by knocking a blind man's pencils out of his hand and goes to bed after pushing the heroine down a stairway.

Not until "The Great McGinty" came along, however, did he get his chance. That's Donlevy's latest picture and in it he plays a Bowery bum who rises to the Governorship.

JUST before leaving Hollywood for the East to meet exhibitors of "The Great McGinty" the Irish-American actor finished work in "The Dalton Boys" and "Brigham Young." But "McGinty" is the basket in which Donlevy has put his eggs and he hopes the movie customers will accept him in a comic-dramatic role.

On his current tour, which is due to expire July 30, he's meeting movie theater operators in the Midwest, the South and along the Atlantic seaboard.

"We're getting along great together," he said. "But don't anyone mention 'personal appearances.' There'll be none of those for me."

He didn't give his reason but one suspects it's because he-man Donlevy, who is built along the lines of a Notre Dame tackle, would suffer bitter agony if he got up on a stage and the audience began hissing and booing him for the foul villain he's been—on the screen.

Accents for End-of-Summer Blacks

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

It never has been economy so much as common sense that has caused smart women to hunt for accessory touches to brighten up their old clothes. The ability to convert listless or jaded costumes into sparkling, new-looking ones was one reason for the Duchess of Windsor's fame as a clever dresser when she was still known merely as Wallis Warfield. Almost every well-groomed woman has that same indefatigable trick of "doing over" last season's things by means of fresh-looking accents. Accessory usage must produce a studied result, however, as nothing creates more optical confusion than unrelated dress accents. Underdoing accessories is safer than making them too focal. The ones pictured here are all lifesavers for "that little black dress" and are so inexpensively priced as to be within easy reach

The Big Decision

She—I wish you would tell me whether or not it's going to rain.

He—Well, of course, the wind's in the East——

She—Does that mean rain?

He—Well, not necessarily——

She—The whole thing is—shall I wear my light clothes or my dark ones?

He—Well, of course it may rain before night.

She—Then you think I'd better wear my dark clothes?

He—No, I'm not saying that. Of course now the sun might come out . . .

She—You're simply impossible! . . . What does this paper say?

He—You never can believe what it says.

She—Well it at least says something . . . "Increasing cloudiness with possible showers before night." . . . Now does that mean it's going to rain before I get home?

He—How would I know?

She—Well, men are supposed to know such things. You're just not interested.

He—Well, I can't see why you want to make such a fuss about it. Why don't you just go prepared for rain?

She—Then if the sun does come out I'll look like an old dark scarecrow with all the other women in white shoes and hats . . .

He—Why don't you wear your white things then and take a chance?

She—Then think how I'd look if it rained! Paddling around in light things and all the other women in neat dark clothes. Besides, I don't want to get my light clothes ruined.

He—Why don't you wear your light clothes and carry an umbrella?

She—Oh all things! Carry an old ugly umbrella with a light outfit! What if I'd meet somebody—like Gwen Flasher?

He—Well, what?

She—You're impossible! I'm going to look out the window. . . . Say, the sun's out! I'm going to wear my light clothes!

He—Well, I'm glad that's settled!

She—Anyway, I really don't believe it's going to rain very soon, do you?

He—It may hold off awhile.

She—You don't say that as if you meant it. . . . Say, it seems to be getting darker. I'm going to look out the window. Oh, the sun's under a big dark cloud!

He—It's going to do something sooner or later.

She—I guess maybe . . . I'd better . . . wear my dark clothes . . . Oh, there's the sun again!

He—It's likely to do most anything—this time of year.

She—I wish you'd tell me honestly—what would you wear if you were I?

He—Well, this is the way it is—if a warm and cold current of air come in contact——

She—I don't care anything about currents of air! I wan't to know what to wear.

He—Yes but I'm trying to explain it to you so you'll understand——

She—You're impossible! . . . I'm just going to wear my old dark clothes and quit worrying!

He—That's a very sensible decision. That's just what I'd do myself.

She—Then why on earth didn't you say so! . . . So that's what you'd really do?

He—Yes indeed!

She—Still . . . if the sun did shine—Say I believe I'll take a chance and wear my light things after all!

Having a Baby Like Training For Athletics

Diet and Physical Conditioning Held Requisites by Experts

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S A lucky mother-to-be who can enroll at one of the maternity centers scattered about the country. Once under the staff's wing, all those puzzling problems can be handed along to experts who will deal with them in a sympathetic but comfortingly matter-of-fact manner.

If you were to come under the aegis of the Maternity Center Association in New York City, Anita Jones, assistant director, would soon have you convinced that having a baby is like going into any athletic event of major importance—that you should train for it. And, in the twink of an eye you would probably be on a training program as carefully planned as a national football star's.

As a matter of fact, Miss Jones is imbued with the belief that the women who take advantage of the necessity for giving their health due consideration are apt to discover that it can be the opportunity for getting into superb physical condition.

Check-Up First Step

The first step—and one almost taken for granted—is the visit to the doctor for a thorough check-over which will reveal any physical weakness. From this examination, an analysis of individual needs can be made and the program planned accordingly.

From clinical reports, it is estimated that about one-third of the prospective mothers suffer from anemia in some form, and anemia can be a serious factor. Strangely enough, it is associated with loss of muscle tone. Miss Jones says that one of the most pronounced outward characteristics is a lack of tone of the muscles of the entire body, which is often evidenced by easy fatigue and facial pallor. The woman who is anxious to retain the firm, lovely contours of her figure will do well to look to her diet, to see that it is high in the iron-rich foods.

From the clinician's standpoint, the effect of an iron-deficient diet on one's looks is a minor consideration. Anemia may be a serious complicating factor in childbirth. Therefore, great stress is placed on the iron-rich foods—pork liver, or beef or calf's liver, lean meat, egg yolks, greens and whole grains. Oddly enough, pork liver, which is the best source of iron, is the cheapest.

Iron in Tablet Form

In addition to foods high in this mineral, the doctor may prescribe supplementary tablets which further augment the diet with iron.

As a rule, the doctor takes the view that muscles which are capable of supporting increased weight should be allowed to continue to do so. At any rate, additional support is not usually recommended until the middle of the fourth month.

If a girdle is needed, Miss Jones warns that its purpose is to support and not to conceal! The only way a prominent front line can be minimized is by pushing the internal organs back and down against the pelvic rim—to the detriment of the mother's health.

In adjusting the girdle, lie on the back on the bed with the legs flexed and the feet on the mattress near the buttocks. Raise the hips until the body is almost in a straight line, and adjust the girdle or band. In this position, the abdomen is in its proper place and better support can be given when the garment is put on then.

Should Girl Abandon Her Friends or Try to Reform Them? They Hold Weekly Parties in Private Homes, The Chief Amusements Being Drinking and Petting

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 18 and in September I will be a junior in a local college. I am going with a boy one year my senior and we expect to marry when we finish school. But that is not my problem. I belong to a social club of girls my age. All last year we were in the habit of giving parties at the homes of different members, each week.

There was never any planned program at these affairs and invariably they ended up as petting parties. Once or twice I tried to plan some entertainment, but the boys always brought drinks and the guests took matters in their own hands. My best girl friend solved her problem in this respect simply by staying away from these parties. I continued going but when the petting started, my boy friend and I left.

Recently, I called a club meeting for the purpose of constructively discussing the faults of the club in general, and of each member individually. My best girl friend led the meeting. It was decided that petting is demoralizing to a girl's character and that our parties should be planned to prevent petting. Each girl decided to get her boy friend's opinion on the matter. My boy friend entirely agreed with me that it made a girl seem cheap to pet and that our parties needed planning.

Shortly after that, one of the girls gave a party, stating that this would inaugurate the reform. When we got there, however, the boys had brought drinks, as usual, and the girls were not objecting at all. The party ended just as all the others had, and no one seemed to mind in the least.

I have decided that I should stop going out with this crowd; but if I did, I would have practically no friends, and I don't want my life to be as narrow as that. I think these girls are nice girls, if only they hadn't got started off on the wrong foot. All of them come from nice families. Should I stop going around with them? Or should I make another effort to reform them?

PERPLEXED GIRL.

No Youngster's Job To Uplift This Group

DEAR P. G.: You would be wasting time trying to "reform" these misguided youngsters. It is their parents' business to pound some sense into their heads and some restraint into their conduct. Your responsibility consists in keeping yourself from being "demoralized." And if this means (a) resigning from the club, or (b) at the very least, staying away from club petting parties, then by all means do so.

Your "best girl friend" has given you an admirable example of how to keep clear of messy situations. Her clean-cut attitude is much to be preferred to your fence-straddling. And it appears that her intelligent choice hasn't detracted from her following. Only a girl who is sure of herself, and respected by a group, would dare take leadership in discussing that group's faults—collectively and individually—to its face.

If your club members rated her a "drip" or "Miss Prim" or "the last of the Victorians," you may be sure she couldn't have swung the meeting to her viewpoint—influencing the audience to concur in the sound conclusion that "petting is demoralizing to a girl's character, etc." It is to be regretted that you aren't comparably forthright in manifesting your convictions. You are a pretty weak sister if you hesitate to do what you think is right, lest in so doing you lose some fair-weather friends.

The touchstone of one's personality is the philosophy one lives by. This is what makes you what you are, and takes you where you go. It is what attracts true friends to you and keeps them at hand. Remember the proverb: "Birds of a feather flock together." The person who has no beliefs or standards—he would go to bat for; or who believes one thing and acts another way in an effort to be popular, is too colorless and mealy-mouthed to be really liked by anyone.

It is plain to be seen that your club associates haven't the courage to call their souls their own. Your slightly greater independence of action is probably due to the fact that you are engaged to be married, and therefore don't feel that you have to throw yourself at the head of every masculine comer, in order to be sure of some masculine attention. But they, alas, even while admitting that "petting" demoralizes them, suffer such desecration just for the sake of a following of sorts—little knowing that by their craven procedure they are imperceptibly losing ground with their suitors, instead of winning their hearts.

If anything "constructive" is to be done on behalf of these youngsters, it must be done by their parents, as I said in the beginning. And it's a mystery to me how such parties as you describe could have gone on, week after week, in private homes, without some father or mother taking cognizance of the preferred form of "entertainment," and reading the riot act to all concerned.

Beyond any doubt, these youngsters are brewing trouble for some luckless members of the group, by their insidiously degrading collective behavior. Somebody is going to get hurt, and badly, if they don't call a halt on their alcoholic revelry. But since you can't reform them, the only way you can be sure that you aren't among the casualties in the final accounting, is to steer clear of their revels in future.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Refrigerator Pie

CRISP rice flakes can work magic in the preparation of many delicious foods. When a cream soup calls for an accompaniment, dress equal amounts of rice flakes and shredded, toasted almonds with melted butter and use in place of croutons. These crisp bits also give a tempting and easy-to-brown crust for casserole dishes. Balls of ice cream rolled in rice flakes are delicious and digestible for both children and grownups. When you are wanting to make a particularly toothsome and different omelet, use rice flakes in the making.

A quart of fresh berries and a rice crumb pie shell will effect a delicious summer dessert—Fresh Berry Refrigerator Pie. You will want to try it now that berries are so plentiful. The recipe follows for crumb pie shell and the filling.

Refrigerator Pie

Make the crumb pie shell by melting 1-3 cup butter in a pie pan. Add ¼ cup sugar and 1 cup finely crushed rice flakes. It will take about 3 cups of the flakes to be rolled into 1 cupful. Press mixture evenly and firmly around sides and bottom of pan. Chill before adding the following filling.

To make filling, clean 1 quart of berries, slice or chop coarsely. Cook 1 cup berries with 1½ cups water. Strain. Mix 1 cup sugar with 1½ tablespoons cornstarch and add the juice from cooked berries and cook, stirring constantly until thick and clear. Soften 1 tablespoon gelatin in ¼ cup water. Add ⅛ teaspoon salt. Cool and add this mixture to the berries. Turn into crumb pie shell. Chill until the pie is firm enough to cut. Serve with sweetened whipped cream if desired. If raspberries are used, the flavor of the pie will be improved by adding 1 tablespoon of lemon juice to the berries.

Wide Deep Yokes Return to Favor

Yokes are in again, but they must be wide and deep to be smart. An enormous white pique yoke, extending from shoulder to shoulder, tops the jacket of a suit created for Wendy Barrie to wear in RKO Radio's "Men Against the Sky." Suit is a cotton seersucker, a beige and brown check brightened with a fine orange thread.

Yokes trim several of the costumes Virginia Vale wears in "Stage to Chino," a story of the West in the roaring eighties. She has adapted one costume for modern wear. It's cornflower blue cotton; yoke is white lawn, finely pin-tucked and edged with a ruffle.

Mrs. Sol Bloom Holds Patent on Process To Put Semiprecious Stones in Figurines

MRS. SOL BLOOM, wife of the New York Representative, is probably the only member of the Congressional set to hold a United States patent. About four years ago she patented a process of inserting semiprecious stones into colored clay figurines to represent jewelry. She also has perfected a method of hardening the clay without heat.

MRS. BLOOM

After Queen Elizabeth's visit a year ago Mrs. Bloom modeled a 6-inch figure of her as she looked on her American tour. More recently she completed a tiny figure of the Empress Eugenie, based on the Winterhalter portrait.

The PWA worker in charge of sprinkling the new grass at the Rock Creek diversion project on P street has difficulty avoiding the neighborhood children on hot afternoons. They have appointed him the community cooling system.

⁂

FOURTH ESTATE—A Post reporter, investigating rumors of nudism in nearby Virginia, stopped at a crossroads grocery store to make inquiries. The storekeeper's wife directed him to one camp, and, as he was leaving, added significantly, "You know, I hear people in them nudist camps go around without clothes on."

While waiting for a streetcar on an F street loading platform a local temperance enthusiast noticed a small urchin beside her smoking a cigarette. She subtly encouraged him to abandon the foul habit by asking him, "Don't you want to grow up to be a big, strong man?"

With the air of one who has heard that line before, he continued to puff as he replied, "No, ma'am, I only 'spect to be about middle size."

Syril Lee, New York publicist who accompanied the winner of the National Home Economics Contest to Washington recently, found on arriving at the Shoreham Hotel that she had left her watch at home. She phoned room service and asked that a clock be sent up. After what seemed an unnecessarily long interval, she answered a knock at her door. Outside were two lackeys with a cot.

⁂

Convention as Exciting As Africa to Explorer

'Why Take Off for the Wilds?' Asks Mary Hastings Bradley; the Roberts Are Guests of Honor at Swanky Party

By Hope Ridings Miller

Chicago, July 17.—"Why take off for the wilds of Africa—when there's a Democratic Convention right here at home?" Quipped Mary Hastings Bradley, noted explorer and writer, who has threaded her way through the jungle many times but has never seen anything more exciting than the current show here.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Frankly more concerned with what's going to happen to Sumatra than who's ghing to be the next President of the United States, she nevertheless expressed herself as being definitely opposed to a third term, when I talked to her briefly this afternoon. Both of us had just arrived at the swanky cocktail party and buffet supper given by Mr. and Mrs. Le Ray Berdeau in the ballroom of the Blackston Hotel.

Guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood ("Chip") Robert, who have been feted high, wide and handsome ever since they arrived here a couple weeks ago. A company, representative of the social Who's Who, turned out in droves en route to this evening's big time convention session. Mrs. Bradley was but one of a number of celebrities who appeared for "a drink and a snack" between 5 and 8 o'clock.

Political talk circulated continuously and any number of luminaries who generally refrain from expressing themselves in public spoke their minds freely—not, however, in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, who arrived early and were at once a center of attention and a focus for photographers. Mrs. Roosevelt never looked smarter in her life. Trickiest hat I've seen this week was her white crocheted skull cap, finished off with small turned back triangles at either side, Dutch bonnet effect. Her trim black frock had a wide collar and matching cuffs of white eyelet embroidery.

Mrs. Clark Hails 'Our Victory'

Gov. Clyde Hooey of North Carolina, only guest in a cutaway, moved quickly through the crowd and then tore away for a couple of conferences before session time. Representative John J. Dempsey, of New Mexico, who came in with his attractive wife, was being congratulated on all sides as a Senatorial candidate, just announced. Former Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring gathered a host of friends around them, and Mrs. Woodring confessed she was a both thrilled and tremulous woman about her assignment, for later, seated in the press box, she was to cover this evening's session for a Kansas City newspaper.

Mrs. Bennett Clark moved from one group to another, talking about "our victory." She was referring to the inclusion of a non-intervention plank in the Democratic platform, a project for which her husband and Senator Wheeler have struggled ceaselessly.

Joseph Davies was a popular guest, seemed to know everybody there. Former Senator and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo collected a number of friends at their table, including Mrs. Claude Pepper and Mr. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner. Across the room, Senator Theodore F. Green, in his usual merry mood, had an apt answer for any political question put to him.

"Who is to be the Vice President, Mr. Senator?" I asked him.

Mrs. Tydings Entertains at Tea

Meanwhile, over at the Palmer House, Mrs. Millard Tydings was entertaining the Maryland delegation at tea, where nobody talked about anything except the non-intervention plank and who was the likeliest Vice Presidential candidate.

"Since it is a Roosevelt blitzkrieg anyway, we might as well have Wallace as anybody else," somebody said. "He seems to be leading the field now."

Earlier in the day, at a luncheon given by Mrs. James Slattery, the V. P. subject was carefully avoided because two second ladies in waiting were among the guests. But political talk accented the gathering just the same, and I, for one, never heard official wives speak their minds with less restraint.

Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, eyes sparkling, entertained the crowd with reports of telegrams her husband received after his speech last night. One, she said, referred to the Senator's gag about the huge twist of tobacco presented to him by the Kentucky delegation and his remark that he would like to give it to Willkie so he'd quit "chewing the rag." The message read, "You'd better watch out, he'll be chewing on you before you know it."

Another telegram carried a slogan: "We rose with Roosevelt; why wilt with Willkie?"

Mrs. James Byrnes said she had spent most of her time here either opening telegrams or answering telephone calls for her husband. Attention between her and Mrs. Barkley was about equally divided. After all, each has a husband who might be Roosevelt's running mate.

Half of Women Wear Orchids

Chicago's swanky Athletic Club, where women ordinarily aren't allowed to enter the front door, was the scene of the party. Cabinet hostess, seven Senate wives and a former Senate wife were in the gathering, which broke up just in time for guests to get out to the afternoon session.

Orchid corsages, which had been as rare as a Republican rooter at a Democratic Convention, appeared on the shoulders of more than half the women. Mrs. Barkley sported a couple of lovely white ones. Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Lister Hill and Mrs. Morris Sheppard were the only big league ladies who wore no flowers.

Mrs. A. B. (Happy) Chandler breezed in beneath the biggest hat I've seen this week—a mixed straw, floppy number, worn with a white linen frock. Mrs. Josh Lee and Mrs. Claude Pepper exchanged notes on convention sidelights; while Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, Mrs. Henry F. Grady and Miss Minnie Mae Fleming speculated quietly on what could happen before the final convention gavel falls.

Still another guest was Mrs. Bruce Smith, of Washington, who formerly resided in Chicago and who has been renewing old acquaintances since she and her husband arrived here late last week. They are staying at the Edgewater Beach and will go later to Newport to open their home there for the remainder of the season.

Social registerites turned up at many a press conference and committee meeting throughout the day. Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, looking like a fashion picture in a neutral wool suit, worn with a tailored blouse and paisley turban, and Mrs. George Sloane represented Virginia's smart set at the women's organization meeting this morning in the Stevens Tower room.

Miss Nancy Cook, close friend of Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. George Backer, wife of the publisher, had front row seats at Jim Farley's press conference. Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg spent the day with Mrs. Bennett Clark, and the two kept their ears continually to the political ground to see whether that non-intervention plank would get into the platform. Mrs. Charles Whitman, wife of New York's former Governor, and Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach turned out at a couple of women's organization conferences.

Wives of Officials Mentioned in Rumors

Washington wives are taking the rap for the comedy of terrors into which this convention may resolve itself. Typical of comments I've heard all day are these:

"Hull would accept the Vice Presidency if Mrs. Hull would let him."

"Jim Farley might be persuaded to stay if somebody could sell Mrs. Farley on the idea first."

"I understand Mrs. Garner would not agree to let Cactus Jack run for a third term as Vice President."

Mrs. Wheeler, they say, wouldn't let her husband run with Roosevelt if the job were offered on a silver platter."

In each instance, I might add, such remarks were made by persons who never met any of the ladies in question, but had heard "a lot" about them.

Hewes Leaves For Newport

Clarence Hewes has left for Newport, R. I., where he will spend a week or ten days with Arthur Bradley Campbell, who is occupying the John Jacob Astor estate, Chetwode.

Mr. Campbell's cousins, the Misses Marjorie and Isabelle Meuser, will be among the models at the fashion show to be given August 10 at Harbour Court, the estate of Mrs. Nicholas Brown. Proceeds will go for British relief. Miss Elise Quinby, of Washington, will also model.

Mr. Hewes will return to his home here for a few days before going to Hot Springs, Va., for a stay.

Mrs. W. H. Gibson Feted by Friends

Mrs. W. Howard Gibson was the guest of honor at a surprise luncheon party yesterday afternoon in her apartment. The party observed the ninety-second birthday anniversary of Mrs. Gibson, niece of William H. Seward, Secretary of State in Lincoln's Cabinet.

Attending the party were Mrs. William R. Stackhouse, of Moorestown, N. J., niece of Mrs. Gibson; Mrs. Charles E. Berry, another niece; Mrs. William A. Morsell, and Mrs. Clifford Stearns.

Newport Surprised At Offer of Haven To Albania King

Newport, R. I., July 17.—With the old guard colonists just getting over their surprise at the 75-cent streamlined luncheons being served at Bailey's Beach, this swank colony got another today when it became known that the redoubtable and battling Mrs. Angela Coyle Kaufman, widow of the millionaire safety razor manufacturer, Joseph Kaufman, has offered her estate, the Castle, at 19 Greenough, for use by royal and titled refugees.

Mrs. Kaufman has already obtained, she said, acceptance from King Zog and his Queen, Geraldine, and their infant son, Prince Skander.

The Castle was built by the late United States Ambassador to Italy, Richard Washburn Child, at a cost of half a million dollars. Last year during the fight over the taven license Mrs. Kaufman threatened to give the Castle to Father Divine.

Miss Aszkenazy Is Hostess At Cocktails

Honorary Member Of Polish Embassy Staff Entertains

Gathering in a congenial group of friends, Miss Natalie Aszkenazy entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock, in the Joseph Coolidge Georgetown home, which she is now occupying.

Miss Aszkenazy holds the position of honorary member of the Polish Embassy staff. Since coming to Washington last winter, she has done valuable work for the embassy. Arriving from Warsaw last September, to see the World's Fair, Miss Aszkenazy was forced to remain here because of the war. She then took up work with the Polish unit of the Red Cross in New York.

Guests gathered in the garden, which is surrounded by high brick walls in typical Georgetown style. The attractive hostess wore a simple white dress, fashioned on tailored lines. Among the guests were several members of the Polish embassy staff, including Count and Countess Lasocka, she wearing a very becoming turban to match her beige sports dress; Prof. Jan de Rosen, Polish artist who is living at the Embassy, and the Counselor of the embassy, and Jan Drohojowski.

There were quite a few of the residential set still in town, evidently, among them Mrs. McCook Knox, wearing a very chic black and white striped dress with red touches, and a straw sailor hat with a red quill and Willkie pin; Mr. and Mrs. James Gibson, she wearing a turban of lilacs with a white dress; Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, who live just across the street from the hostess, and Miss Mary Johnson.

Party With Candy, Fortune Telling And Hot Dogs Swells War Relief Fund

Federation Holds Large Benefit Fete At Women's City Club

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

A Red Cross flag in front of the Women's City Club yesterday afternoon and evening announced the large benefit party given there for the war relief fund by the District Federation of Women's Clubs under the auspices of the new coordinating committee, headed by Mrs. John T. Lucker and Mrs. LeVerne Beales.

Inside there were booths and tables decorated with the Red Cross emblems where gifts, "white elephants," cakes and candy, hot dogs and household wares were sold. Committee members and representatives of the various clubs assisting, wore Red Cross headbands and veils. Everywhere one turned were reminders of the cause for which the benefit was staged.

There were two fortune tellers' booths, one presided over by Dr. Laura Brennan, of the Political Study Club, and the other by Mrs. H. L. Richardson, of the Women's City Club. Mrs. Gladys Middlemiss, president of the Women's City Club, and other officers were assisting generally as members of the hostess organization.

Mrs. Edgar Boyd Kay, president of the Political Study Club, and Mrs. Edward Campbell Shields, first vice president, presided over a table where there were linens for sale. Mrs. Frank MacMaugh and Mrs. Harvey Craver, of the Petworth Club, had the "white elephants." Sales of candy, cakes, and lemonade were directed by Mrs. Beales, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser and Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle.

The Housekeepers' Alliance had a booth with household wares. Mrs. Frederic Newburgh, the president, was in charge, assisted by Mrs. Wallace Streeter, Mrs. Ashton F. Embry, Mrs. J. E. Atkison, Mrs. Frederick Yates and Miss Mary Yates.

The Junior Alliance conducted a fish pond that was popular with both children and grown-ups. Those who served at this and at selling soft drinks were Mrs. Albert Lance, Mrs. Jay P. Conger, Mrs. John R. Phillips, Mrs. A. Wendell Davis, Mrs. Roland Dulin, Mrs. Mary Battle Bowman, Mrs. Daniel Wathey, Mrs. Yvonne Knapp, Mrs. C. H. Stevens, Miss Annie Lee Chisholm and Mrs. Woodson T. Birthright.

Hot dogs were sold by Mrs. Gus Schuldt, of the Women's City Club.

There was also a display of quilts of which Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, of the Fire Department Auxiliary, and Mrs. Paul Burk, of the Takoma Park Women's Club, were in charge. The collection included several quilts made by Mrs. Howard's mother, Mrs. John M. O'Bryen, of Shelbyville, Mo. One of them, she called "Round the World," had 5,940 pieces patched in rainbow colors and beautifully quilted. Mrs. Burk had on display a crazy quilt made by her great-grandmother. There was also on display the first flag flown from the Capitol after the States of Arizona and New Mexico were admitted to the Union in 1912, with the two stars added at that time. When the flag was taken down to be replaced, former Representative F. E. Erk asked for it and it has been in his possession since.

A program, which began at 4 o'clock continued, at intervals, during the rest of the evening. Miss Dixie Moran acted as mistress of ceremonies and introduced as the first personalities among the program guests, Mary Mason, of WRC., and Art Brown, also of the radio.

There followed piano solos by Patricia Morales, readings by Stanley Miller, accordion duets by Ginger and Danny (Virginia Smith and Daniel Braelove) in gypsy costumes, soprano solos by Pauline Holcomb, numbers by the Bruderer mandolin and guitar trio, readings by Jane Dollarhide, numbers by the Wiegand acrobatic troupe and solos by Dorothy Skinner Walsh, accompanied by Jimmy Smiley.

In the evening, Elinor Lee, of WJSV, introduced Frances Eaton Woodworth, who talked briefly of her war experiences in England, giving point to the benefit. later there were numbers by Mary Conroy, soprano, and Mrs. Frances Northcross, of WOL, introduced Earle Preble Donoho, young pianist. He entertained, followed by Maurice Cornell, tenor. Some of the performers who appeared earlier were also presented a second time.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation; Mrs. Virginia White Speel and Mrs. Edgar Briant Meritt, past presidents, were among the patrons of the benefit.

Zontians Hear Mrs. Street Tell Of Convention

Mrs. Nan R. Street, president of the Zonta Club, yesterday presented a report of the recent annual convention of Zonta International at the club's luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A.

The outstanding event of the conclave from the standpoint of the local organization was the election of Mrs. Mary Moyers McElroy as international president by unanimous vote. Mrs. McElroy, who is an active member of the Washington club and former international vice president, is now in the Northwest, visiting clubs in that section. She expects to return to the international headquarters in Chicago the end of this month, spend a few days there, and then will come back to the Capital.

Mrs. Street also reported that the local Zontians had received second prize for their monthly bulletin, Zontagram, and honorable mention for the newspaper publicity the organization had received on its activities. Throughout the convention, club programs and problems were considered in their relation to world affairs, said Mrs. Street.

There are six Canadian clubs in the international membership. At a luncheon, without previous announcement, a voluntary contribution of nearly $500 was made by the members and delegates to be given to the Canadian clubs for war relief work.

Mrs. Bayly Gets Cake, Bouquets And Greetings on 82d Birthday

GREAT BOUQUETS of flowers, a birthday cake with candles, telegrams and greeting cards deluged the apartment of Mrs. William Hamilton Bayly at the Roosevelt Hotel Tuesday, on the occasion of her eighty-second birthday.

Mrs. Bayly is honorary president of the Washington Y. W. C. A. and the largest bouquet in the beautiful array was one of deep rose-colored gladioli, sent by the "Y. W." She also received a telegram of congratulations from Miss Elsa Peterson, local president. A message came from her niece and nephew in Ohio, in which the telegraph operator sang "Happy Birthday to You" over the telephone when she answered.

MRS. WILLIAM H. BAYLY

For more than a year Mrs. Bayly has not been able to leave her bed, but, with almost daily visits by at least some of her many friends in the Capital, and by means of her wide reading and her radio, she keeps in close touch with local activities and takes keen interest in national and international affairs.

She served as president of the Washington Y. W. C. A. for 14 years, from 1907 to 1921. This long period included the days of the First World War, when the organization here had the heaviest responsibility of its history in caring for the thousands of girls and women who came to the Capital from all sections of the country to do Government work. The housing and recreational provisions for these strangers within the city were problems with which the "Y. W." dealt under Mrs. Bayly's leadership.

MERMAIDS—Being "in the swim" will present no problem here to enterprising members of the Soroptimist Club—they are practicing up.

Under the tutelage of one of their number, Ruby Neal, who is director of physical education for the Marjorie Webster School, a group of club members goes to the school on Tuesdays and Thursdays to learn swimming and diving in the large pool.

They all started from scratch or something less than that, most of them having a fear of the water to overcome before they could start actually learning to swim.

Ruby began gently. She encouraged her sister Soroptimists to splash around, put their heads gingerly under the water to discover it wasn't fatal to get eyes, ears or nose wet. Then she led them to the discovery that, holding firmly to the ladder or the rope with their two hands, the rest of them would float right on top of the water. This much accomplished, they learned to kick swimmer-fashion and then to use their arms. The results were soon apparent. They began their course the first of June and all now swim the width of the pool or more and the most intrepid of the group is already making high dives. More than that, they are having a grand time doing it.

Marjorie Webster, owner of the school, and a former president of the club, comes down as often as she has time and cheers them on.

Among the members of the swimming group are Zada Daniels, who had never been in a pool before her first lesson in this one; Dr. Elizabeth Sohen, Afton Wright, Bertha Jones, Zelma Poulson, Elinor Lee, Laura Waters and Marie Marvel.

IN HAWAII—A card from Nell V. Smith (Mrs. William W.), an active member of the League of American Pen Women, says she is all settled at Waikiki Beach, Honolulu, for the summer. She describes it as "little short of paradise," so it doesn't look as though she were planning to come home much before the club season opens.

Mrs. Smith left for the West shortly after the biennial convention of the National League of American Pen Women, for which she did all of the publicity. She was also publicity chairman for the local branch last year and is past president of the Professional Writers Club.

U. S. Checking Aliens Closely, Dimock Says

Marshall E. Dimock, administrative assistant of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, addressing the Woman's National Democratic Club, declared yesterday that this country was in 50 per cent better shape so far as the handling of aliens was concerned than it was at the time of the first European war a generation ago.

"In a time of national emergency," he said, "a people look to their internal security. Exclusion of undesirable aliens and the assurance that those who are already here are acting in a lawful and loyal manner becomes of the highest importance.

"The number of unnaturalized aliens in our midst has diminished very greatly, from approximately 7,500,000 to approximately 3,500,000. At the time of the last great crisis we had no border patrol, which is our first line of peace defense, and which since its establishment in 1824 has been protecting our 6,000 miles of border. Within the past few weeks the staff of this important agency has been practically doubled.

Mr. Dimock spoke at the third in the series of study group meetings being held every Tuesday at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, with speakers discussing national issues. Mrs. Philip F. Dodson is chairman.

Who rides after Paul Revere?

'WAKE UP! WAKE UP! The Germans are marching!...Wake up! Wake up! The brownshirts are coming!"

Once more America hears that ringing shout of alarm, with only two words changed after 165 years.

▶ Since the tenth of May, every flying bundle of newspapers that thumps against a way-station platform has been the thunderous knock of the rider sent out by the lantern signal in the Old North Church. With editorial and news dispatch, cartoon, column, and special article, the far-sighted among America's newspapers have roused the town and the countryside.

Never had citizens been more soundly asleep in their complacent beds. "Safe behind three thousand miles of good green water"... smugly confident of the power and might of friendly former allies ... blandly indifferent to the condition of our fighting forces ... blind to sinister stirrings in neighbors to the south and even in our own midst.

That voice in the darkness, that knock at the door came not a moment too soon.

▶ Where and how the present-day menace to freedom will strike, no man knows, or whether it will strike by direct invasion at all. We know that attack is possible—and that is enough.

So now, as always before, Americans have sprung to action. Today's Ethan Allens are gathering together their Green Mountain Boys in training camp, machine shop, and flying field. Today's Israel Putnams have left their plows standing in the furrow, scrapped their plans for making the peaceful machines of work and play, put their factories and their brains at their country's command.

▶ Today, if Knudsen and Stettinius, Stimson and Knox had time for such thoughts, they would know how George Washington felt when he took command at Cambridge. The same swarm of eager civilian volunteers, no two alike in equipment and training, but all anxious, devoted, impatient. Across the desks of the defense chiefs flows a steady stream of letters, thousands of them, all of the same tenor, "I'm ready. Put me to work."

▶ The Paul Reveres of the American press have done their work well. Now they are riding out again with other messages—just as important. Messages of courage ... and patience ... and hope.

For we too have our fainthearts who are ready to quit when the outposts are taken. We have our near-sighted who imagine that they would rather lose their liberties than their comforts, and don't see that they stand to lose both.

We have our cynics, young and old, who suppose that all wars are futile because the victory in the last one was thrown away. We have our warped and embittered—our potential Charles Lees and Benedict Arnolds.

All of us need protection from the defeatism that seeps from such sources. We need our own uncertainties and fears cleared up. We need our spirits heartened about what we have done, can do, and are now doing.

▶ This protection, this enlightenment, this encouragement, the press is supplying now every day. Day after day, our newspapers are bringing us news of plans completed at Washington in weeks, whose details in normal times would have consumed years. Soon they will tell us of raw-material problems solved, of factories and mills swinging into stream-lined production, of rapid organization and training of our man power.

We have asked for miracles and we are getting them. But the press will remind us that even Aladdin's palace took a night to build.

▶ In this planning stage, when all roads lead to Washington, the metropolitan newspapers and wire services have increased or reassigned their staffs in the Capital.

They are covering stories so big, developments so rapid, that even the early days of the New Deal seem quiet in retrospect. Economic relations of the Americas, history-making moves of the State Department, expansion of Army and Navy on a scale never seen in this hemisphere, sensational industrial decisions affecting hundreds of centers from Hartford to Southern California ... the situation is the greatest challenge to energy, ingenuity, and vision that this generation of newspapermen has ever met.

Because the question of security for our country is today's No. 1 problem, TIME, the Weekly Newsmagazine, has decided to establish a new department, to be devoted exclusively to the progress of National Defense.

Here, in one place, the anxious citizen will find reports from every field—government, management, materials, factories, shipyards, man power, training schools, public opinion—every detail in the current picture of the nation's defense effort. TIME's much-discussed summaries, which have been so widely quoted in recent weeks, give some idea of the completeness and grasp with which this vital news will be handled.

▶ As the circles widen out from Washington, TIME's fact-finders and trend-observers will be ready and waiting wherever the ripples roll in. If things go wrong, bog down in personalities, get tangled in red tape, TIME will say so. If things go as well or better than can humanly be expected, TIME will say that too.

TIME, along with all loyal Americans, believes that an intelligent, informed, single-minded citizenry can and will build a strong defense—a defense so strong, so dynamic, and so efficient, that no power on earth will be able to attack or challenge the vital interests of the American people.

This is one of a series of advertisements in which the Editors of TIME hope to give all the readers of this newspaper a clearer picture of the world of news-gathering, news-writing, and news-reading—and the part TIME plays in helping you to grasp, measure, and use the history of your lifetime as you live the story of your life.

Laws Tries Out Domestic Court Plan

Clerk Appointed to Gather Evidence in Child Custody Case

Justice Bolitha J. Laws adopted the methods of the proposed "streamlined" Domestic Relations Court in a child custody dispute which came up in the District Court yesterday.

He appointed Assistant Clerk Philip M. Hamilton as a commissioner to investigate the assertions of the parents who both claim 10-year-old Joan McNeil. Hamilton will present his findings at a hearing before Justice Laws next Thursday.

Parted Six Years Ago

The child is the daughter of Alton D. McNeil, 35, insurance executive, 1416 Staples street northeast, and Mrs. Margaret Emrich, 30, T. B., Md. They were married June 10, 1926, and separated September 30, 1934. McNeil obtained a divorce on grounds of desertion in 1937. Later Mrs. McNeil married Edwin F. Emrich, 37, Maryland chicken raiser.

From the time she was 8 months old until June 22 this year, Joan lived with her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Virginia Thompson, Capitol Heights, Md. Then she went to live with her mother on the chicken farm.

McNeil filed a custody petition shortly afterward, asserting that his former wife had an undisciplined temper and that the living conditions on the chicken farm were undesirable.

Noting sharp conflicts in the affidavits of the parties, Justice Laws resolved to have an investigation by an impartial court official, such as would be customary in the proposed domestic relations court.

Attorneys Welcome Plan

McNeil's lawyer, Donald S. Carruthers, said he welcomed the investigation. "The report of an unbiased officer cannot fail to be most helpful to the court in such a case," he said.

"We have been sadly in need of such a method," said J. Benjamin Simmons, Mrs. Emrich's lawyer. "It is highly desirable that the judge should be aided in this hearing by the report of a court officer, instead of having to depend on the statements of parties and witnesses who cannot help but be prejudiced."

MEALTIME—Wendell Willkie Wiener gets his 9 o'clock dinner from Nurse Esther Mason at Columbia Hospital

Wendell Willkie Wiener, 3 weeks old tomorrow, now weighs 3 pounds and 5 ounces, his father reported last night. The premature baby, delivered by a Caesarian operation, has gained 9 ounces since he was born at Columbia Hospital on June 28.

Little Wendell, born a few hours after his namesake's nomination is still in the incubator, although his condition is so improved that oxygen is no longer necessary, it was said.

His father, Bernard B. Wiener, said that Mrs. Wiener's condition had improved and that she would be moved today to their home at 2017 Key boulevard, Arlington. But the baby, by hospital rule, must remain for several weeks or until he weighs 5 pounds.

Capital News In Brief

Plane Crashes Here; No Damage—It's Toy

"It's a plane crash" was the cry that spread like wildfire through the neighborhood of Third and Hamilton streets northwest last night.

Police and newspaper switchboards buzzed with telephone calls from residents who had seen the ship plunge toward the earth and disappear behind the roofs. The evening meal in many a household was disrupted as citizens started out to hunt for the plane.

Police arrived and joined the search. An ambulance screamed up, ready to rush the injured pilot to a hospital.

Then along came John Fogelgren, 17-year-old Roosevelt High School student, of 317 Emerson street northwest. He was looking for his model airplane, powered by a one-fifth horsepower gasoline engine.

Timed to cut off after 20 seconds, the motor had failed to stop running after John sent his plane up from a vacant lot nearby. It had risen about 400 feet, then crashed three blocks away in an alley off Jefferson street between Third and Fourth. A bent airplane nose was the only damage.

The car had been stripped of four wheels and was badly dented.

Summer Heat Brings Summer Cold, Says Health Department

Those pesky summer colds are with us again though of "no unusual prevalence," the D. C. Health Department reported yesterday, while the U. S. Public Health Service stated the people of the Nation were in excellent health.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, yesterday advised rest, regular hours and a light diet such as fruit juices, soups and custards in treating the summer cold. If temperature and discomfort continue it is best to call a physician, he said.

One cause of colds at this time of year is sleeping under an electric fan, he said. Most of the colds are probably due to the fluctuating temperatures but look out for the chill from sitting in a draft after perspiring or wearing improper clothing, he warned. Congestion of tissues in the nasal cavity will result.

Any cold is a highly contagious type of infection, and isolation is necessary and desirable to keep it from spreading, Dr. Seckinger advised.

The Public Health Service reported a decline in prevalence of the eight principal communicable diseases compared with previous years during the period from May 19 to June 15.

The incidence of diphtheria, influenza, measales, scarlet fever, smallpox and typhoid fever was less, but cases of infantile paralysis rose from 66 in the preceding month to 179. The service said this was due primarily to outbreaks in the State of Washington, where 77 new cases occurred, and in California, which reported 44 new cases.

Schools Plan 9 Courses For Defense

320 Now Enrolled For Classes Which Are Due to Start Monday or Tuesday

Nine trades, which would have a prospective starting enrollment of approximately 320 trainees, were recommended yesterday for the national defense program in District public schools by the Board of Education's Advisory Committee on Vocational Education.

They are machine shop, automotive maintenance and repair, electrical work, sheet metal, woodworking, welding, drafting and blueprint reading, aircraft, and painting.

Classes will go into operation Monday or Tuesday, if the Board of Education approves the recommendations at a meeting expected to be held later this week.

At the start, one class in each of these studies would be organized for both white and colored students, with the exception of aircraft and mechanics. For those two courses, equipment is available at present only at Phelps Vocational School for colored students, L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of education, said.

Trainees will be drawn from WPA and other public employment rolls, and also from employed men in industry who want extension courses to improve their skills. Although the vocational public schools and shops in several high schools have a capacity of approximately 1,400 students for this program, Cantrell said plans would be expanded gradually as needs were established.

Sufficient teachers for the first stage of the program are available from regular faculty members, Cantrell said.

The committee includes Austin S. Donaldson and Charles H. Fearing, employer representatives; D. C. Dow, C. F. Preller, Hilyard R. Robinson, employe representatives; Evelyn Bright Buckley, Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, and Dr. Dorothy Boulder Ferebee, homemakers.

Capital Baptists Will Attend N. C. Training Assembly

A large delegation of local Baptists, including 24 from National Baptist Memorial Church, will attend the annual Baptist Training Union Assembly opening on Saturday at Ridgecrest, N. C.

Miss Pittard

Headed by National Memorial Church's Training Union superintendent, Donald W. Sawtelle, that congregation's group will consist of Joan Beattie, George Birdsall, Elinor Goode, Mrs. Minnie Gregory, Frederick Gregory, Eleanor and Evelyn Hanson, David Jenkins and Marjorie Johns.

Also Frank Kelley, Garland Kent, Genevieve Pace, Orella E. Pittard, Mrs. Edith Ripley, Leonard Ripley, Louis Ripley, Bob Rosenberry, Mrs. Donald Sawtelle, Edward and Roger Sawtelle, Winifred Sherwood, David Thompson and Roy Winston.

Leaving the National Church on Saturday at 7:30 a. m. by auto caravan, the party will enjoy a historical tour en route to the assembly. Miss Pittard, native Virginian, and executive secretary of the church's training union, will be guide.

Ralley Protests Police Actions In 4th Precinct

Approximately 100 persons attended a mass meeting called last night by the local branch of the National Negro Congress, the Washington Committee on Democratic Action, the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, and other organizations, at Zion Baptist Church, in protest against alleged police brutality, particularly in the Fourth Precinct.

The Rev. A. Joseph Edwards, pastor of the church, expressed the belief that as long as the Southwest Citizens Association met in the Fourth Precinct Station any protest from colored members of the community would be nullified unless the cause was made city-wide. Other speakers stated that community members feared to attend the meeting because of intimidation by police officers.

A second meeting will be called two weeks hence, Robert Robinson, president of the District Workers Alliance, stated, to enlist the aid of civic and fraternal organizations throughout the city in investigation of police activities in the Fourth Precinct in alleged violation of civil liberties of the residents and contrary to the duties of peace officers.

16,000 Enthralled at Watergate's Sunset Opera; 'Faust' Is Triumph for Fortune Gallo and Cast

Outdoor Productions Proven Practical Despite Difficulties

Postlude

By Rav C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra collaborated with Fortune Gallo in a performance of Gounod's "Faust" last night at the Potomac Watergate. The cast:

Faust.....Sidney Rayner
Marguerite.....Helen Gleason
Mephistopheles...Harold Kravitt
Valentine.....Mostyn Thomas
Siebel.....Charlotte Browning
Martha.....Myra Manning
Wagner.....James Francis
Conductor: Guiseppe Bomboschek

Last evening's performance of Gounod's "Faust" at the Potomac Watergate, under the skilled supervision of Fortune Gallo, who had drawn upon the resources of his San Carlo Opera Company for the greater part of the personnel, was not only excellent in the matter of vocalism, but also a feat of adequate presentation under handicaps which only a stage manager knows. The adaptation of scenic sets to the limited space in the acoustical shell was effected with a neatness that provided the essential theatrical illusion without any disturbing incongruities. Moreover, the thousands of auditors enjoyed the opportunity, rarely afforded in an opera house, of hearing the instrumental score played by an orchestra of 70, and the voices amplified to an extent that carried them clearly over the orchestral climaxes.

The performance was as successful in every way as the initial experiment of "Madame Butterfly" last summer, and the National Symphony Orchestra added another artistic triumph to its growing list of achievements. The practicability of outdoor opera at the Watergate has now been conclusively demonstrated, and the only unpredictable factor yet to be mastered is some method of keeping thunderstorms as distant as the one that flickered along the horizon last night.

The principals in the cast acquitted themselves with more than credit, for each one sang with as much care for intonation as though the entire responsibility for the performance rested upon his or her shoulders. If comparisons are to be drawn between them, the honors for consistent purity of tone and lyrical quality in phrasing go to Sydney Hayner in the title role. In the first act he set himself a standard from which he did not depart, and his singing had an unflagging fervor.

Helen Gleason, after overcoming a tremolo apparent at her first appearance, gave a warm and sympathetic interpretation of Marguerite. Her voice had firmness and depth as well as a pleasant surface color, and its agility in the jewel aria was eminently proficient.

As Mephistopheles, Harold Kravitt satisfied both the basso profundities of the vocal line and the saronic characteristics of the role. He sang with an easy sonority and a round vigor of tone, and acted with a sauve malice. Mostyn Thomas gave to the barytone utterances of Valentine an admirable crispness of diction carried on a fluent and resonant tone. The Siebel of Charlotte Browning and the Martha of Myra Manning were impersonations marked by sedulous detail in both singing and characterization.

Haunting music and throbbing drama combined at the Watergate last night to enthrall an audience of more than 16,000 at Washington's second sunset opera, Gounod's "Faust."

A powder-gray sky, heavily overcast, deepened into a dark purple as the metaphysical plot unfolded. Even the moon hesitated to observe the blanketed scene as a jaunty, derisive Mephistopheles (Basso Harold Kravitt) led his willing victim, Faust (Tenor Sydney Rayner), to take his first halting steps on the road to perdition.

Only an occasional silvery sheen above the heads of the audience revealed the presence of the moon. But below, on the water encircled stage, a lunar madness was uncovered as the beauteous village maid, Marguerite (Soprano Helen Gleason), destroyed her infant in an insane frenzy produced by Faust's slaughter of her loving brother Valentine (Barytone Mostyn Thomas).

The huge crowd filled scores of silent canoes in a semicircle about the stage; every seat, every step, was packed with attentive listeners; the Memorial Bridge rail was lined three-deep; the bleachers overflowed.

Only the green lawn beyond the steps was partially deserted, as the audience crowded upon the pavement to stand eight deep above the steps, where a glimpse occasionally could be caught of the colorful barge below.

On the stage, the pity embodied in Marguerite and the fear produced by the red and black-caped Satan maintained the tragic illusion completely. The audience was tense, absorbed, entranced.

Planes roared overhead at intervals, marked by green and orange wing lights. But this distraction—just as the long stream of automobile headlights that winked by like fireflies on the far-off Virginia shore—went unnoticed.

One transport plane was compensation for them all. It appeared during the last prison scene where Marguerite, crouching suppliantly, rejects Faust's offer of escape, repents, begs divine forgiveness and prays.

Just as the chorus of heavenly voices broke into the gray cell, proclaiming pardon for the repentant sinner, the plane's twin landing lights flooded the river with white light and its roar was an accompaniment from the skies for the ministering angels who wafted the maiden's spirit to its eternal home.

The clouds that drifted overhead as the opera opened raised fears of rain in the cast. Only the short, stubby, gray-haired producer, Fortune Gallo, remained imperturbable.

"My name is not Fortune for nothing," he said. "I will do a little coaxing. We will have good weather. Everything will go all right."

After the passionate duets that closed Act III, the enthusiastic audience refused to wait and demanded curtain bows. A large bouquet of roses was rushed out upon the stage for blond, willowy Miss Gleason.

"Who sent them?" the reporter asked as the flushed soprano returned off-stage.

"I won't tell," she replied. "Must I reveal my secrets?"

Bolles to Ask Statehood For Capital

Will Offer Bill Calling for Vote And Representation On Federal Matters

A plan for making the District the forty-ninth State while keeping it under Congressional control was proposed yesterday by Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, a member of the House District Committee.

Bolles said he thought it "a mild erosion of the Constitution" that residents of the National Capital should be deprived of the franchise when the rest of the country is looking forward to the November elections as a chance to express the public will.

The measure, which Bolles intends to introduce next week, would retain the commission form of government and Congressional control of all local legislation but would give Washingtonians an opportunity to vote for the President and Vice President and to have representation in Congress.

The Commissioners would be elected rather than appointed, but would be responsible jointly to Congress and to the people.

Bolles also proposed to set up a joint Senate and House committee to handle District legislation as a sort of city council or State Legislature in place of the present two committee.

The present system, he said, permits too much buck-passing between the Senate and the House.

Bolles said that his plan for giving Washington the vote could be adopted by Congress without amending the Constitution as most suffrage proposals require.

"The whole setup here is cockeyed," he said. "Washington has a population larger than a dozen States. It sends delegates to the party conventions to help select the Presidential nominees, yet these same delegates can't vote in the November elections."

Armstrong Scores TKO Over Lew Jenkins

Nats Beat Chicago, 5-2, for 4th Straight

25,000 See Bout Halted At End of 6th

Welter Champion Survives Terrific Battering; Texan Unable to Arise

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, July 17.—Henry Armstrong, the perpetual motion battler from Los Angeles, halted the victory march of Lew Jenkins, the Texas knockout artist, tonight by beating Lew into such bloody helplessness that Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the bout at the end of the sixth round.

Lightweight Champion Jenkins almost fell off his stool in his corner as Donovan intervened. After Armstrong, the welterweight champion, had floored blood-smeared Jenkins six times during the scheduled 12-round bout.

Although no title was at stake tonight at the Polo Grounds because of a weight agreement, Armstrong, at 27½ years old, smashed his way to greater glory by registering the technical knockout, which was announced from the ring officially as coming in the sixth round, since the bell had not rung for the seventh.

Henry Weathers Storm

Jenkins, after being floored three times in the sixth session, staggered to his corner, lurched down upon his stool and turned his bloody face up to his seconds for sponging.

Manager Hymie Caplin threw a sponge of cold water into his face, and Jenkins began to slump sidewise from the stool.

The Texas youngster of 23, who wrested the lightweight title from Lou Ambers in May by a knockout and who was working on a string of eight straight knockouts—was through for the evening.

In registering this kayo before a crowd estimated at 25,000, Armstrong weathered a terrific barrage of stunning hooks in the first and second rounds, which were won by the rangy Texan. Again in the electrifying fifth Jenkins rallied from groggyland to smash away at the Negro's head until he was bleeding from gashes above both brows.

Lew Floored Twice

Jenkins, floored for the first time in the fourth round by a hard left hook, rallied unexpectedly and magnificently in the beginning of the fifth, but Armstrong, crouching low—bobbing and weaving and rolling—weathered this bombardment and came on to floor Lew for counts of one and nine in that same fifth session.

He was virtually finished when he went to his corner where his seconds worked frantically over him to ready him for the sixth. Lew

Blow by Blow As Armstrong Scores T.K.O.

FIRST ROUND

Jenkins straightened Henry up with a left hand, and landed a right to the head as Armstrong crowded in. Jenkins tossed two lefts to the body and a left to the jaw, but Henry still pushed forward. Jenkins landed a fast right cross and Henry held momentarily. Jenkins fought the round in a half crouch to match Armstrong's crowding style. Jenkins landed a slashing right to the jaw near the end of the round for the best punch of the session. Armstrong finished up belting away at the body. Jenkins' round.

SECOND ROUND

They flailed away at each other's body for several seconds at the start. Then Jenkins exploded a left and right off the face, but Henry still crowded in. Jenkins landed two rights to the body and another to the head, and still Henry came on. They exchanged sizzling lefts and the crowd roared. Jenkins, backing away, slipped to one knee late in the round, but it was not a knockdown. Jenkins bounced two more rights off Henry's head and Armstrong peppered away at the body. Jenkins' right found its mark again, but Henry's left drew blood from Lew's nose just at the bell. Jenkins' round.

ROUND THREE

Jenkins' right hand continued to find a target, but Henry just kept coming in, trying to land body punches. Armstrong was wide with most of his left hooks up to now. Jenkins nailed Henry with a right to the mouth.

Indians Lose In 13 Innings To Yanks, 4-3

Cleveland Goes Into First Place as Tigers Lose 2; Feller Victim

By the Associated Press

New York, July 17.—The Cleveland Indians climbed into first place in the American League today by the inspiring process of losing a 13-inning 4-to-3 decision to the New York Yankees.

The Detroit Tigers, of course, cooperated by losing both ends of a double-header at Boston, and fell back to a tie with the Red Sox for second place.

Game Goes Into Overtime

But some annoying trifles took the edge off the performance and sent the contest into overtime, finally ending when Red Rolfe and Bill Dickey wrapped two singles around a sacrifice in the thirteenth for the deciding run.

Until that time Feller, who had won 14 games and lost only 5 before today, had given the world champions just four hits. But he never had been ahead of the game.

In the first inning Frank Crosetti dropped a single into center and Feller walked Rolfe and George Selkirk, the latter on four straight pitches, to fill the bases. Then Joe DiMaggio slapped a bounder to Sammy Hale, who booted the ball long enough to let in Crosetti. Feller wild pitched Rolfe across and after fanning Bill Dickey, purposely passed Tom Henrick to load the bases again. It took a fast double play by Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack to stop the debacle.

Dahlgren Beats Out Hit

In the third inning Babe Dahlgren beat out a hit to Hale, moved to second on a sacrifice and to third on an infield out. Then Feller, making a nonchalant stab at a return throw from Catcher Rollie Hemsley while pitching to Rolfe, let the ball roll off his glove and out to deep short as Dahlgren scored.

Under these circumstances it took two home runs to keep Feller in the ball game. Jeff Heath lifted one to start the second. In the sixth Lou Boudreau walked and Hal Trosky blasted his eighteenth circuit blow.

Sports Writers Want to Abolish Sat. Night Games

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, July 17.—Sports writers in the American Association cities want the league to abolish Saturday night baseball games.

At a session of the American Association chapter of the baseball writers organization they recommended to the club owners that no more Saturday night games be scheduled, pointing out that many Sunday morning papers were printed early and results of late games might be missed.

Buck Newsom Hurt As Tigers Lose Two

Bosox Tie for Second Place in League With 8-3, 8-5 Victories; 'Bashful Buck' Suffers Broken Thumb

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 17.—The Detroit Tigers should have "stood in bed" today. They not only lost a double-header to the Boston Red Sox, 8 to 3 and 8 to 5, which forced them to share second-place in the American League with Boston, but they lost the services of Buck Newsom, their ace pitcher who had won 13 consecutive games for them.

Newsom's thumb on his pitching hand was broken in two places when he caught a throw from Rudy York while dashing to cover first base on a grounder by Ted Williams in the fourth inning of the opener.

Despite the injury, Newsom pitched to five more batters, retiring the side but giving up two runs in the process.

Up to that time he held a 3-0 lead against the Sox whom he was facing for the first time this season before a capacity crowd of 32,400 that saw the Sox emerge from the day's battling only a half-game out of first place, still held by the Cleveland Indians.

Newsom said a doctor who examined the injury told him he would be out of the game for four weeks, but the pitcher asserted nonetheless that he intended to be back in action by July 27. He said he based his opinion on experience through having had bones broken on nine different occasions.

'Absurd,' Tunney Says of Proposed Dempsey Fight

By the Associated Press

Williamsport, Pa., July 17.—Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey won't square off against each other in the boxing ring for charity.

"I gave up the ring 12 years ago, and have no intention of ever returning to it in an active capacity," the former heavyweight champion said. A director of an aviation corporation, Tunney flew to Chicago after attending a board meeting here yesterday.

Challedon Beaten by Eight Thirty

Brann's 1939 Champ Third in $50,000 Massachusetts 'Cap

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 17.—George D. Widener's 4-year-old Eight Thirty, toting 126 pounds as if it was a feather, equaled the track record today while capturing the sixth running of the $50,000-added Massachusetts Handicap by a length and a half from the Greentree Stable's Hash before a 30,000 crowd at Suffolk Downs.

The 9-10 favorite, W. L. Brann's Challedon, 1939 champion of the turf, closed fast to take the show position from the Brandon Stable's Pass Out, which set all of the early pace. Eight Thirty covered the mile and an eighth in 1:49 to match the performance given by Seabiscuit, with 130 pounds aboard, here in 1937.

Eight Thirty, under the capable handling of Jockey Harry Richards, broke third in the 11-horse field and trailed Pass Out and the Falaise Stable's War Dog until he pounded into the home stretch to take full command, despite Hash's brave challenge.

Top Weight Too Much

Challedon, off eighth, was kept in hand during the early running, but found the top weight of 130 pounds too much of a burden when called upon by Jockey George Woolf to move up as the field made the final turn. The Brann Star's closing rush, however, pulled him to within a length and one-half of Hash and a half-length in front of Pass Out,

3-Run Rally In 8th Wins For Leonard

McNair Makes 4 Errors at Third; Myer, Walker Star; Dietrich Chased

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

Dutch Leonard checked his personal losing streak and extended the Nats' winning streak to four games yesterday with the help of the White Sox who obligingly tossed five errors into the proceedings. The score was 5 to 2, but as late as the eighth inning it was all very indefinite.

Bespectacled Bill Dietrich was pitching five-hit ball and getting no worse than a draw with Leonard when the game moved into the eighth in a 2-2 deadlock. Then the Nats got obstreperous, knocked Dietrich out of the box, and assaulted Relief Pitcher Clint Brown for three runs.

Buddy Myer, seemingly rejuvenated, was the author of the hit that broke the tie, but the rally was set in motion by Gerald Walker's fourth straight hit of the day, a single to center with one out. When Dietrich walked Zeke Bonura in this crisis, Manager Jimmy Dykes led him off the scene and fetched Brown from the bull pen.

Fans Bloodworth

Brown seemed to be the perfect antidote when he fanned Jimmy Bloodworth for the second out, but Myer roused him out of his admiration for himself, if any. The Nats' second baseman drove a hard shot past Third Baseman Eric McNair for a single that scored Walker, and when Left Fielder Solters' throw took a high hop over Catcher Tresh's shoulder, Bonura moved to third and Myer continued to second.

Whereupon, Jimmy Pofahl made matters conclusive with a line drive two-bagger to center field that ushered home two more runs and nobody cared much when Pofahl was thrown out trying to take

Hagen's Ryder Cup Golfers Win Match, 7-5

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 17.—America's Ryder Cup golfers, undefeated since 1933 when they bowed before Great Britain's finest, smashed the challenge of upstart Gene Sarazen's team today by breaking even in singles competition, thereby winning the two-day charity battle by a score of 7 and 5.

Although his team lost, Sarazen, who had criticized the Ryder selections and asserted he could pick a team to beat the Cuppers, was still shouting defiance and asking for a rematch. An 8 and 7 personal shellacking he absorbed from Henry Picard, the Professional Golfers Association champion, failed to silence effervescent Gene.

"It was too close for me to admit defeat," Sarazen said. "After all, the issue was decided by only one match. And, believe me, I'll get together a team next year that will win. The real winner, of course, was the American Red Cross."

Ben Hogan of the challengers defeated Sam Snead, 2 and 1. They had a best ball of 62.

Billy Burke, of the Sarazen Knights, beat Byron Nelson, 1939 National Open champion, 4 and 2.

Ed Oliver, also a challenger, routed Jimmy Hines, 8 and 7.

Injury Jeopardizes Newsom's Winning Streak

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Sidney Charles Hudson is taking form as the best thing that has happened to the Washington club since it unconsciously stumbled into Dutch Leonard three winters ago and claimed him for the draft price of $6,500. Like a shining hope in an otherwise blighted season stands young Hudson. Clark Griffith was caressed with the kiss of Dame Luck when he dipped into a Class D league and came up with this kid.

POVICH

What Hudson has accomplished—six straight victories—wasn't in the books for a lad out of the lowest classification of all baseball leagues. Not since Bobby Feller vaulted off the sandlots into major league fame has their been any approach to Hudson's performance. And Feller, in his first season, couldn't string together six straight victories.

We're not comparing Hudson to Feller. There's no attempt to challenge the greatness of Feller on Hudson's behalf. Hudson's record still reads eight victories against nine defeats. He doesn't have Feller's fast ball or earned run average, and Feller has been a great pitcher for four years. But Hudson can fail of Feller's greatness and still be a swell pitcher.

In a sense, though, he has already outstripped Feller. The poise and shrewdness that Feller developed only with the years marked Hudson's pitching from the day he worked in the first big league game he ever saw. More remarkable than anything else has been that phase of Hudson's pitching. Unlike Feller, he bore no traces of the bush leagues.

Bucky Harris hasn't been picking his spots for Hudson. His six victories have been achieved against six different clubs. In turn, he beat St. Louis, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit and Cleveland. Twice within a week he beat two different clubs which, at the time, were leading the league.

He doesn't know quite what to make of it all. He's still blinking at the new vistas that have opened before him. He said so yesterday as he sat on the bench and answered questions with a straightforwardness as natural as your next breath.

No, his mother has never seen him pitch a big league ball game. She's coming to Washington next month from Rossville, Ga., to watch him pitch. That's one he hopes he'll win, he said.

"I know one thing," said Hudson. "I must be the luckiest guy in the world to be in the big leagues. I never could figure out why Bucky Harris didn't send me back to the minors long ago. I expected it every day. I looked for it when I lost my first two starts. When it didn't come then, and I won the next two, I began to think I might make it after all. And then it got to be pretty awful.

"I lost three straight, four straight, five straight, six straight. You know what would have happened if I had been with some other club. They'd have shipped me back before I pitched 'em right out of the league. But Bucky kept sticking me in there. I was afraid to look in his direction when it came my turn to pitch, but he always gave me the nod. I wanted to win so bad I could taste it, but I was just a bum.

"Then I got mad at myself. I got mad at those clubs that were licking me, too. I stopped trying to be too careful. It was affecting my control, and I always could throw strikes. I stopped trying to be right down the middle and just reared back and let my fast one go. I began to win ball games and get my confidence back. That was a big help. Then I found out I was beginning to look as tough to them as they had been looking to me. It's nice to feel that way."

Hudson was stating it simply enough, but he wasn't telling the whole story. The fellow who did was Rick Ferrell, his catcher.

"That kid has just begun to find himself. He was a good pitcher the first day we ever looked at him. He could field his position and he could hit and was a big help to himself. But he found out that the same stuff that could have kept him by in the Florida League would be murdered up here.

"He had one delivery—a swell overhand fast ball. No curve, no change of pace, no nothing else. Just that fast ball that he threw from close to his neck, and they'd lay back and wait for it. Watch him now. He's a different pitcher. Notice that sidearm thing he throws. It's a beaut. Now he's got the batter guessing. They're not digging in up at the plate like they could when he was a one-pitch pitcher. Hudson's got the edge now, not the hitter. That's why he's winning.

"He's a pleasure to work with. No beefing, no squawking. Never says anything, in fact. But he's no dead fish out there. He can get mad. When he walked Trosky the other day he didn't speak a word out loud, but to anybody who can read lips it was wonderful entertainment."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 17.—Al (Weskit) Weill, one of the founders of the "I win, we draw, you lose" school of fight managers came in to Mike Jacobs' offices from Jacobs Beach, shaking off the sand and the touch artists with neat flicking motions.

CONSIDINE

"I'm thinking of fighting Dempsey in Buenos Aires," Al said, and his submerging of his fighter in his own personality didn't seem as strange this time, because Al's series of chins and stomachs make him look like one of Dempsey's more recent opponents.

"I've talked to Waxman (Max Waxman, Dempsey's manager) about it and he's hot on the idea," Al reported. "So is Dempsey. We figure Dempsey against Godoy would do a hundred and fifty ($150,000) in Buenos Aires."

Mike Jacobs let loose a shrill scream and stamped from the room. In a moment he came back, red of face and bawled, "You've been in the fight game 30 years, Weill. Had a lot of champions and you're always been a clean cut fella. (Ed. note: Some reporters understood Mike to say, ". . . You've always taken a clean cut.) Now you want to louse it up. You want to ruin the game. You want to drag an old guy like Dempsey in there and get him kilt."

"He ain't so old," Weill protested. "He's only 45, and lookit Bob Fitzsimmons. He fought some bum when he was 47; I think he fought until he was fifty some."

"Go ahead," Mike yelled. "Go ahead to your Buenos Aires. They'll lock all of you up and forget where they threw the key, if you put on a fight like that down there."

"Yeah? Well, listen to this. They not only want it, but they've got a joint down there named Luner Park what seats 80,000, and a bunch of guys who'll deposit the guarantee money in a New York bank."

"Nix on pesetos," Weill hollered. "I get paid in American dollars." Then a thought struck him. "But maybe I could pay Godoy in pesetos."

A reporter spoke up and said, "I don't think you're going to see Dempsey in any more rings, after he and that bum fell out through the ropes in Detroit the other night."

"That didn't hurt him none." Weill said. "They fell on a boxing commissioner. Besides, Dempsey won't hafta worry about ducking holts in this Buenos Aires fight. Godoy ain't no rassler. He's a fighter.

"They're nuts about Godoy down there. And Dempsey! They still think he's as good as the day he licked Firpo."

Jacobs reared him to a close and stomped off to his thinking room, to store up a new blast against the portly manager who appears to be set on taking the fighter whom Mike built up, painstakingly, off to a lush and naive boxing land where Mike's long arm doesn't reach.

A way to select the next all-star baseball team has been suggested by James D. Foote, of Washington, D. C. He proposes that since the game has been given back to the fans, who will choose next year's roster, that steps should be taken to effect a true consensus of the real baseball fans. He suggests that the period between next May 15 and June 15 be the balloting time, and that the voters be confined to persons who actually attend ball games during that period. They could vote on the back of their rain check, for one player and an alternate, except in the case of a pitcher, where two alternates could be named. It would help to do away with the slipshod methods by which the players were voted onto early all-star teams by the fans, for several stars usually were overlooked in those days by unthinking voters who remembered too vividly the exploits of former stars who had faded. Attending the games the voters would get a curate and up-to-the-minute line on talent. Incidentally, you'd have to go to nine games to vote for a full team—which fact should appeal to the owners.

Gil Hunt Wins as Upsets Mark Maryland State Tournament

D. C. Player Reaches Net Quarterfinals

Talbert Bows, 6-4, 1-6, 6-1; Margo Lee, Miss Lincoln Win

By Jack Munhall
A Staff Correspondent

Baltimore Country Club, July 17. One of the biggest parade of upsets that has plagued early rounds of a major tennis tournament this season did not halt Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C., here today as the fifth seeded played advanced into the singles quarter finals of the Maryland State and Middle Atlantic championships.

Favored for the second straight day with the cool weather which seems indispensable to his top form, Hunt throttled William Talbert, University of Cincinnati ace, 6—4, 1—6, 6—1.

Otherwise the District of Columbia split even in two doubles, with the result of a third team match still in doubt as darkness halted competition. Margo Lee, of Washington, joined Emily Lincoln, Boston, Mass., to gain quarter finals of the women's doubles with a 6—3, 6—2, 7—9, 6—4 conquest of Argyll Rice, West Hartford, Conn., and Barbara Strohbar, Newton Square, Mass.

Washington Pair Default

Hazel Bishop and Charlotte Decker, both of Washington, defaulted to the English combination of Rita Jarvis and Rita Brown, when Miss Bishop failed to appear. Davie Johnsen, middle Atlantic singles champion, paired with Seymour Greenberg, the National Public Parks champion, against George Pero and Bill Hardie, University of Miami, and were trailing 12—10, 6—4, 5—5, when their match was postponed until tomorrow.

Outstanding developments in a dizzy day of surprises that kept a gallery of 3,000 fans in a constant state of excitement were these:

The elimination of defending Champion Hal Surface, of Kansas City, by George Toley, University of Southern California, 4—6, 6—0, 6—3.

The defeat of sixth-seeded Harry Prusoff, of Seattle, Wash., by youthful Bob Harman, of the University of California, 2—6, 7—5, 6—1.

The loss of fourth-seeded Gardner Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., to Jack Kramer, hard-hitting youngster from Belvedere Gardens, Calif.

The elimination of second-seeded Gracyn Wheeler, of California, by another Californian, Mary Arnold, 2—6, 6—3, 7—5.

The upset of second-seeded doubles players Don McNeill and Elwood Cooke by Bob Harman and Charles Mattman, of Los Angeles, 6—2, 6—3, 4—6, 6—2.

McNeill Gains Quarter-finals

McNeill, workmanlike as usual, and Welby Van Horn, as carefree as McNeill was intent, and Elwood Cooke joined Hunt as the seeded men to gain the quarter-finals. Van Horn and Cooke, however, both had their hands full, and for a time it appeared as though either or the pair also would be upset.

Van Horn, not yet having learned the vital importance of concentration early in the match, overcame "Giant Killer" Eddie Alloo, of Berkeley, Calif., 1—6, 6—4, 9—7.

Today's feature singles matches in the men's division will bring together the temperamental Van Horn and the even more temperamental Gil Hunt.

Seeded Players Upset in Clay Court Tourney

By the Associated Press

New York, July 17.—The "bottom" dropped out of the seedings in the Eastern clay court tennis championships when Eddie Amark, of San Francisco, and Chauncey Steele, of New York, ranked No's. 7 and 8, were eliminated just short of the quarter-final round today.

Amark bowed to Ken Bartelt, of Los Angeles, 3—6, 6—4, 6—4. Steele yielded to Billy Umstaedter, of Millburn, N. J., 6—4, 6—0. Umstaedter and Bartelt were among seven who gained the round of eight. One berth will be filled tomorrow.

The advance into the quarter-finals was led by Frank Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., and Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif. Parker defeated John Thackara, of New York, 6—1, 8—6, while Kovacs routed Charles O'Neill, of Portland, Oreg., 6—0, 6—1. Joe Fishbach, of New York, seeded fifth, disposed of Jack Mahoney, former University of Virginia athlete, 6—1, 6—0.

Tru-Blu, Linens Win at Ballston

Tru-Blu and Standard Linen entered the finals of the Middle Atlantic Softball Tournament last night at Ballston Stadium by emerging victorious in semifinal games, but Standard's triumph came under protest.

After Tru-Blu defeated Powers Builders, 5-0, in the opening game behind the no-hit, no-run pitching of Billy Sullivan, the Standard ten came through with a 5-4 upset of International Business Machine.

I. B. M.'s protest was based on a seventh-inning incident in which David Singer was called safe at third after he had been waved out. The umpire ruled Singer, of the Linen ten, safe after first calling him out, insisting that the base was not on a parmanent foundation. The I. B. M., however, insisted the base was properly anchored and that Singer merely overslid.

In the Tru-Blu victory, Sullivan allowed one man to reach second and two to reach first—all in the fifth inning. If the protest is disallowed, Tru-Blu and Standard Linen will meet tomorrow night at Ballston for the title.

Third Cavalry Poloists Win Double-Header at Fort Myer

Sixteenth Field Artillery and War Dept. Teams Bow in a Big Afternoon's Play

By Anne Hagner

A double-header polo bill was the order of the day at Fort Myer yesterday as everybody on the post who ever wielded a polo mallet chose up sides and played enough periods to thoroughly exhaust themselves and their ponies.

To view the situation as chronologically as possible, the Third Cavalry was in a happy mood because a couple of its teams did some rapid bamboo-bashing (polo balls not being made of willow any more, but the more alive bamboo) to take two games, 5-3 and 3-2, to defeat the Sixteenth Field Artillery and the War Department teams, respectively.

Maj. P. C. ("Pete") Rodes, broad-shouldered Artillery back, made some beautiful shots in the first game that resounded like the sunset gun to prove valuable assists to his team's hard-earned points. The only 5-goal man now playing at the post, Rodes looks like the mainstay for future action when the Cavalry ceases polo next week and leaves the Artillery to carry on.

Capt. Lawrence R. Dewey, who has made the yellow-shirted Cavalry quartet more markers than anyone else on the team so far this season, was again responsible yesterday for three points.

Things got confusing for the non-initiated spectators when everybody on the Cavalry side traded shirts and sent in a new team for the second game, this time against the War Department. Three-fourths of the War Department's team was named Williams, and rumor had it that they were all quite closely related, as in father and two sons.

Ralph Bogart Among Contenders In Conn. Tourney

Eastern Point, Conn., July 17 (AP). Menaced on the one hand by an array of seasoned veterans and on the other by a flock of ambitious youngsters, Tony Kosinski, of Bridgeport, begins defense of the Marston-Shenecossett Trophy tomorrow in the twenty-first annual men's invitation tournament at the Shenecossett Country Club.

Kosinski, who hasn't been conspicuously successful in tournaments thus far this year, is the nominal favorite in the four-day competition, which opens with an 18-hole qualifying test.

Among the contenders of high school and college age who are bent on dethroning the 1939 cup-winner are Bobby Patrick, 17-year-old Norwich Free Academy student, who was runner-up in the recent Connecticut Amateur; Eddie Foy, of Montclair, N. J., Holy Cross football player, who was runner-up to Kosinski here last year; Ralph Bogart, 19-year-old stylist from Washington, D. C.; Bobby Donohue, 18-year-old Shenecossett Club champion, and Art Williams, of Bridgeport, captain of last year's Yale freshman team.

Luke Hamlin Beats Cubs, 2-1, For Dodgers

Pitches Three-Hitter With 'Sailor' Working; Democrats See Game

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 17.—Luke Hamlin, the Brooklyn Dodgers' problem child, pitched a three-hitter today to whip the Chicago Cubs, 2 to 1.

Ho Potota had his "sailor" working wonders for seven of the nine innings. Until the fifth, when the Cubs scored on Phil Cavaretta's double and Gabby Hartnett's single, only two men had reached base—one on a walk and one, Bill Nicholson, on a single in the fourth. After the Cubs scored, they got only one other man on base, a walk in the ninth.

The Dodgers went to work early on Rookie Jake Mooty, getting a run in the first inning and the other in the second.

Association All-Stars Beat Kansas City, 5-3

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, July 17.—Huc Geary, youthful shortstop, paced the American Association All Stars to a 5-3 triumph over Kansas City here tonight.

The Miller freshman, who last year performed in the Class D Florida State League, was instrumental in every scoring rally staged by the league selection although it was a two-base clout by Ab Wright, Minneapolis outfielder in the eighth that decided the contest.

Except for a peculiar play Wright's blow might have gone for a home run and the score climbed to 7 to 3.

The paths were jammed at the time and two of the runners got across the platter easily. Walker was delayed at second by the third runner, Roberto Estalella, another Minneapolis gardener, and both were out on the relay to Catcher John Riddle.

It was the second straight year the Blues, winners of the 1939 pennant and the Little World Series champions of 1938, have lost to a team chosen from the seven other clubs in the circuit by sportswriters. It also was the second year in a row that an attendance record was set. Tonight's crowd totaled 18,499 persons and included such notables as K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, and William Harridge, president of the American League.

Suspension Follows Doping Case at Hagerstown Race Track

Single Ply Stimulated, Tests Show

Purse Distribution Changed as Questre Gets Major Share; Squabble Is Winner

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—Following rulings against two horsemen yesterday, stewards revealed today that Single Ply was stimulated when he came from behind and won the second race on last Friday's program. The report of the official chemist was that the saliva test taken on the horse after the race was positive.

The announcement of the stewards directed that the purse distribution on the race had been changed to award the $275 winning money to H. Z. Isaacs' Questre, which finished second. The other horses in the finish were moved up a position with Mrs. A. S. Bowman's Schley Ginna getting fourth money of $15.

Whitney Suspended

Trainer W. G. Whitney and W. G. Merion, who was not listed as the owner of the horse, were named in yesterday's ruling. Whitney was suspended and Merion denied the privileges of the course. Single Ply ran in the name of H. Fleet. As usual, the official announcement read: "The ruling in no way affects the betting on the race."

Betting and attendance continued to set records here today. The largest Wednesday crowd in the history of the track watched H. Florentine's Squabble come from out of the clouds to win the Sharpsburg Purse, featuring the program. With Jockey J. Leyland doing the booting, the 5-year-old daughter of Dunlin won by three lengths.

J. E. Crider's Little Harpist was second a length in advance of Pandoramint, owned by E. H. Titmus, jr., in the test of 6½ furlongs. Squabble brought her backers a $7 mutuel.

Wins Under Drive

Pandoramint and Little Harpist did most of the front running during the early stages, while Jockey Leyland was allowing Squabble to settle into best stride. On the backstretch and with 3 furlongs to go, Leyland turned Squabble loose and the mare circled her rivals and went on to win in businesslike fashion under a drive.

John E. Hughes' Misty Eye turned in her third straight victory over the local 5-furlong course, much to the delight of the favorite players who collected $3.10 in the first race. Upholder proved a surprise winner in the second event and paid $40.30. Those who coupled the "two aces" in the double collected $67.

Selections at Hagerstown

Dear Al:

With three victories in seven days of racing it looks as if John E. Hughes' Misty Eye is the 2-year-old champion around here. Is it true that Jockey Beverly Hacker has joined the ranks of married men in the local jockey colony? Speaking of jockeys and their families, Dick Machado and Buddy Root, jr., are whooping-cough victims. Dr. and Mrs. Walter Mitchell stopped by to take in the racing en route to their Ohio home. Jockey A. F. Martinez, injured in a training accident, plans to resume riding today. Eltonhead was scratched yesterday because it was discovered he was not eligible. For once there is no schooling list here. It seems the horses have been acting kindly to the Puett starting gate. Jockey Joe O'Malley took his first mount since Charles Town yesterday. R. S. Reynolds, jr., shipped six horses to Rockingham. H. O. Wilt's Lead Please threw a fit and will be on the shelf for some time. Russell Oaks and Leeds Riely, of the Charles Town official family, were visitors. The entry of the horse, Son o' Sting, has been refused here—identification troubles. Jockey G. Napier has left for other points. Cookie is Hagerstown's No. 1 Benningite. Chief Evergreen goes today and I'm making Trainer-Owner Peg Hanna the first installment payment on those 00 aspirin I promised him. Every time a horse is entered in a race here and fails to get in, he is given a "star." In some cases it takes six or seven "stars" to get a horse into action. And some people talk about a horse shortage. For today's entries there were 130 more horses than could be placed on the entry sheet. Of those who did get in the entries, 35 of those are "also eligibles" and will not go postward unless there are scratches in the main body of entries. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—On the Beam gets another chance here. This one had poor racing luck in two starts at this track and is due for clear sailing. Mayfern should go to the top, but I doubt if she can stay there. Satin Marie is a long shot possibility.

Second race—Blue Prelude gets in this with a feather assignment and could be the right one with proper handling. Princess Lady has worked well and raced kindly at Charles Town. Reigh Tetrarch is a dangerous contender.

Third race—Tavern appears best suited of these. Likes the track and I'm going to string along. Aster Princess was miserably handled last out and will be close with better riding. Goodwine belongs with horses of this type.

Fourth race—The Brown-Frank entry of Eltonhead and Corsica seems the best of those gathered for this sprint. Both won at the meeting and they have like weight of 113 pounds. War Scare ran well last out but appeared a bit short. That race should help. Gay Frank's early speed must be respected.

Fifth race—West Sea was a winner through disqualification last out and should improve, now that he knows the way around the turns. Sure Touch has had poor racing luck and is better than shown. Brilliant One will improve in mud.

Sixth race—So Fong was messed about last out and can do much better. Perhaps I'm biting off too much for him in this field, but I'm going to take my chances. Disraeli and High Aim appear to be best of the others.

Seventh race—Blox seems to have too much on the ball for this gang. Sun Sweep is dangerous when they are as cheap as these. Chief Evergreen runs for new owner and may be benefited by the rest.

Best bet—Brown entry.

Buck Worsham's 68 Captures Pro Sweepstakes at Chevy Chase

Andy Gibson, Passano Win Pro-Amateur

N. E. Rogers Takes Amateur Handicap; Low Gross to Shea In State Tourney

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The city's only real big-time prospect among the young golf professionals, Buck Worsham, the 20-year-old assistant at Chevy Chase, played his home course at its longest yesterday and won the pro sweepstakes in the Maryland State Golf Association tourney with a 1 under par 68.

The pro-amateur went to the Baltimore team of Bonnie View Professional Andy Gibson and L. B. Passano, amateur from the same club, who put together a best ball, 64. Gibson was 72 while Passano helped him eight shots with three birdies and five handicap stroke holes.

Low net in the amateur handicap event went to the tournament veteran from Beaver Dam, N. E. Rogers, with 82—14—68. Congressional's Billy Shea won low gross honors with a 73 to Volney Burnett's 74.

Young Worsham finished in the money in the third tournament in as many days by winning the pro sweeps. Monday he tied for third in the Bedford (Pa.) Open Championship, and on Tuesday he was runner-up in the Maryland State Junior Open.

Drops 40-Footer

The long-hitting youngster didn't waste any time getting started in his sub-par round. He dropped a 40-foot birdie putt on the first hole and a 12-footer for another birdie three on the second. He three-putted six and missed a foot putt on the ninth and was out in par 35. Coming back he started with two more birdies, from 15 and 3-foot putts, missed the green on the fifteenth, dropped a 25-foot birdie putt on the seventeenth and with 4 for a 67 he three-putted the last green in a bid for a 66.

Wiffy Cox, Congressional professional, had par for a 68 on the sixteenth tee but two bogeys in the last three holes ran his score to 70 and second money in the pro sweeps. Gibson and Lewis Worsham, Buck's older brother were out of the money with 72's, the older Worsham's round including 16 pars.

Houghton-Mattison Duo Tie

Al Houghton, the newly crowned Bedford Open champ who has monopolized a majority of the pro-am tournaments this season, and his partner Doug Mattison tied for second in the pro-am with Buck Worsham and host club golf committee chairman, Robert Stead, jr., with best ball 65's.

Young Worsham also figured in the three-way tie for third at 66 with another partner, Norman Frost, of Columbia. Cox and Billy Shea and Lew Worsham and Volney Burnett also posted 66 totals.

Two amateurs tied for second net prize in the simon-pure sweepstakes competition— Jerry Birch, Beaver Dam, withm 88-19, 69, and Bill Parker, Hillendale, 81-12, 69.

F. M. A. Nine Wins

The F. M. A. Hardware baseball club overwhelmed the Stone Straw nine, 8-2, yesterday, with Third Baseman Wood and Catcher Hutchinson winning free tickets to the Sunday game between the Nats and the Browns here for outstanding play. Wood figured in a triple play in the third, and Hutchinson was instrumental in most of his team's runs.

Public Links Players Leave for Nationals

Zent, Oliveri, Jankowski, Morris to Represent Washington at Detroit; Leave by Motor Car; 192 Make Up Field for Municipal Tournament

Washington's four-man delegation to the National Public Links Championship left at 3 o'clock this morning for Detroit, scene of the tournament that starts Monday with the first two day's qualifying.

Ken Zent, Andy Oliveri, John Jankowski, and Bob Morris piled into the latter's car before dawn and will attempt to reach the Motor City by 8 p. m. They will have tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday for practice rounds over the Rockham Golf course.

The boys all made a trip to East Potomac yesterday afternoon where Manager Tommy Doerer, jr., handed the players expense money from S. G. Leoffler, public links concessionaire, who annually foots the bills for the local muny players. The U. S. G. A. allows public links players only $5 a day expenses.

The championship field of 192 made the grade after 38 sectional qualifying rounds from an original entry of 2,600. The total entry is a record in addition to the 31 States, Districts and Territories, also a record while the Harding Cup team entry of 34 is also a new mark.

Andy Swedzko, the 1939 champion is one of four former champions entered, others are Al Leach, David Mitchell and Charles Ferrara, the '31 and '33 titleholder.

Pairings and starting times released yesterday by the U. S. G. A. find the District entries well scattered on Monday's opening round when Oliveri is the fifth man off the tee and Zent the next to last. The others are midday starters.

Oliveri, the two-time city public links champ who went to the second round of the Nationals last year in Baltimore, will play at 7:44 Monday and 11:21 Tuesday with William Korns, Salt Lake City, Utah, and William E. Doll, Louisville, Ky. Bob Morris, who gained his berth in the Nationals via the play-off route, is set for 11:07 Monday and 2:51 Tuesday in the company of John Pasikowski, Pittsburgh, and George Studinger, of San Francisco.

Jankowski, making his debut in National competition, will play at 12:17 Monday and 8:33 Tuesday with Wallace Hollstrim, Worcester, Mass., and Michael Stefanchik, Gary, Ind.

Zent, a newcomer to public links golf here and also to National competition, has John Figeira, South Gate, Calif., and Vito Surico, Chicago, as partners at 2:51 Monday, last threesome off the tee, and 11:07 Tuesday.

The three low qualifiers from the District, Zent, Oliveri and Zankowski, will comprise the District's Harding Cup team in the two-day medal competition, preceding the match play.—M. W. W.

Sectional P. G. A. Qualifying Rounds Set for July 26

Middle Atlantic sectional qualifying rounds for the National P. G. A. championship have been definitely set for next Friday, July 26, over the Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club. The 36-hole trials had been definitely set for Five Farms but the date was undecided.

Entries of the local P. G. A. members should be sent to John Flattery, secretary-treasurer, at the Terra Mariae Club, Towson.

Nats Defeat Chisox, 5 to 2; Fourth Straight third on a poor relay to the infield.

It was a brutal sort of defeat for Dietrich who was pitching the equivalent of shut-out ball until the eighth inning uprising of the Nats. Washington's first two runs were directly traceable to errors by McNair, who was playing out of position in anemergency created by the injury to Bob Kennedy.

Before his luckless afternoon ended, McNair equaled the American League record of four errors by a third baseman in a single game. The mark was established by Buddy Lewis in 1937 and equaled a year later by Frank Higgins, of the Red Sox. To his discredit, McNair had two wild throws and a pair of muffs.

Leonard deserved to win his ball game. He gave up two runs to the White Sox in the first inning when former Nat Joe Kuhel bumped a home run over the right-field wall after Webb opened the game with a single. That was the last Chicago run. The big knuckle baller pitched shutout ball for the rest of the way in completing an eight-hit performance, and scoring his first victory in his last four starts.

He had to bend to his task to keep the Nats in the ball game. In the second inning, Tresh doubled with one out, but was unable to advance. In the third, Webb opened with a walk, but Leonard struck out Kuehl and Webb was out stealing on the pitch. In the fourth, Solters and Wright led off with singles, but the Dutchman extricated himself. He speared Appling's line drive into the box in the sixth and turned it into a double play. Tresh opened the seventh with a single and couldn't advance. Webb singled to start the eighth and Leonard stranded him on second.

Lewis Stars in Field

The Nats countered in the first inning with one run after Dietrich walked Case and Lewis to start the game. It was an unearned run, however. Walker beat out a hit to McNair and when the latter tried for a force play and made a wild throw to second, Case romped home from third. Lewis was out when he also tried to advance on the error.

Dietrich was a party to the Nats' second run that tied the score in the fifth, however. He pitched a single to Lewis with two out and then unloosed a wild pitch. Lewis, not content with merely taking second, dashed for third and was safe only because McNair dropped Catcher Tresh's low throw. Gee Walker, with his fourth straight hit, a single to deep short, moved Lewis home with the run that made it 2 to 2.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Dutch Leonard takes down chief honors in the Man of the Month contest with his winning performance yesterday against the White Sox. Points were distributed as follows:

To Leonard, 14 points, because he kept the Nats in the ball game by pitching shut-out ball in the last eight innings, allowing only eight hits.

To Gee Walker, ten points, because he made four of the Nats' nine hits, because he figured in the first run, because he drove in the second run, and because he started the winning rally in the eighth with his fourth straight hit.

To Buddy Myer, six points, because his eighth-inning single drove home the winning run.

To Jimmy Pofahl, six points, because he made three of the Nats' eight hits, and because his double that scored two runs clinched the game in the eighth.

To Buddy Lewis, three points, because he singled in the fifth and scored the tying run, and because he made two brilliant catches in rightfield. The totals:

Sidney Hudson	41	Jimmy Pofahl	15
Rick Ferrell	32	Zeke Bonura	10
Buddy Myer	27	Alex Carrasquel	5
Gee Walker	23	Jimmy Bloodworth	5
Cecil Travis	22	Sammy West	5

Blow by Blow As Armstrong Scores T.K.O.

roundhouse right that Lew didn't like. They stood in midring for several seconds, just clouting away. This was the most vicious round so far, with defense on each side tossed out the window.

Jenkins' round.

ROUND FOUR

For a full minute Jenkins held Armstrong off with straight lefts. A left hook, right on the mouth, floored Jenkins near Armstrong's corner. He got up at nine, and Henry tore in, trying for the kill.

Jenkins backed off trying to recover. Then another left hit him on the mouth and he held. Jenkins bounced two left hooks off the mouth. Henry tore in, throwing swings with both hands. Another left landed on Jenkins' mouth, and still he punched back. A right hand made Lew's knees buckle near the end of the round and cut Low on the corner of the left eye. Armstrong's round.

ROUND FIVE

Jenkins tore out and threw punch after punch to Henry's head, cutting Armstrong's right eye with a swinging left. He just backed away as Henry came in and threw about 50 punches before Armstrong could get in close.

Henry scored with several right swings to the body midway through the round and Jenkins appeared tired. Jenkins went down from a body punch near his corner for a count of two, then was floored again for a nine count from a right hand.

Armstrong rushed in for the kill and was peppering Jenkins about the head at the bell. Armstrong's round.

ROUND SIX

Between rounds a doctor examined Armstrong's eye and ruled that the fight could continue. Armstrong was in close now and peppering away with both hands. Suddenly Lew backed off and they slugged away near Henry's corner. A left hand opened Henry's eye again, and a right uppercut straightened him up.

A left hook to the chin floored Jenkins for a three count in his own corner. Henry came in throwing everything behind each punch. Suddenly Henry opened up and nailed Lew with two rights to the chin.

A left dropped Jenkins in midring for a nine count. Henry threw both hands and Jenkins went down for another nine count. Henry came in so fast he slipped to one knee, but it was no knockdown. Armstrong was throwing punches at the bell. Armstrong's round.

Armstrong wins by technical knockout between sixth and seventh rounds.

3-Month Rise In Industrial Output Noted

Half of Early-Year Recession Recovered, Reserve Reports

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that industry had made up about half of its early-year losses.

The board said its index of industrial production jumped from 108 in May to 114 in June, and advanced an unestimated additional amount in July, so far. After reaching an all time high of 128 last December, the index fell to 102 in April.

The board said that the May index rise was due primarily to increased production of iron and steel and textiles.

Coal production was high, but petroleum output declined. Automobile production declined seasonally, and construction activity, after balancing higher public projects against lower private ones, was virtually unchanged.

The June index of 114 brought industry back, on a seasonally adjusted basis, to about the levels of early October last year, when one of the sharpest rises in history began. In June, last year, the index was at 98.

Foreign Markets

London, July 17 (AP).—The securities market leveled off after early declines today, but trade was still under the shadow of the forthcoming supplementary budget. Fears of increased taxation influenced recessions in many issues, especially among the industrials. British government bonds showed losses of around ¼ point. Chinese bonds remained heavy, but Japanese issues steadied after initial declines on reports Anglo-Japanese talks were proceeding satisfactorily. Oils were firmer where changed, but other commodity stocks were neglected.

Liverpool—Cotton futures lost 13 to 18 points today. Selling was prompted by disappointing textile activity and declines in Egyptian cotton.

New Utility President Served as Democratic Presidential Elector

By the Associated Press

New York, July 17 (AP).—Justin R. Whiting was selected president and a member of the board of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation at a meeting in Wilmington today, the company announced. He succeeded Wendell L. Willkie, who resigned to pursue his campaign as Republican nominee for the Presidency of the United States.

Whiting, born in Michigan in 1886, and prominent in Michigan legal circles, has been general counsel for C. & S. He has been associated with the company, or its predecessors, since 1912.

Mr. Whiting was a Democratic Presidential elector from Michigan in 1932.

His association with utilities began almost immediately after graduation from the University of Michigan in 1907 with the degree of LL.B. He began practicing law that year at Port Huron, but in 1908 he removed to Jackson, Mich., and associated with Sanford W. Ladd in representing the street railways of southern and western Michigan.

He resided in Detroit from 1917 to 1921, when he became general counsel for the Michigan Electric Railways and returned to Jackson.

In Expert Hands—Willkie

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 17 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie, said today that the Commonwealth and Southern Co., which he formerly headed, would be "in excellent and expert hands" under its new president, Justin R. Whiting.

The Feeling Is Mutual

Wilmington, Del., July 17 (AP).—Justin R. Whiting, elected president and a member of the board of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation here today to succeed Wendell L. Willkie, told newsmen when asked what he thought of Willkie's Presidential prospects:

"Mr. Willkie always has done pretty well, and I guess he'll continue to do so."

50-Cent Dividend Voted by Libby

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Libby, McNeill & Libby, canner and packer of foodstuffs, declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on common stock payable August 5 to shareholders of record July 31.

The dividend, voted yesterday by the directors, will amount to $1,813,992 on 3,627,985 shares outstanding and is the first dividend action on common stock since October, 1937.

Earnings for the fiscal year ended March 2, 940, amounted to $3,787,237 or $1.04 a share. Unsettled conditions at that time made it seem desirable to postpone the declaration of a dividend, the announcement said.

Cotton Futures

New York, July 17 (AP).—July cotton contracts expired today. After sharp fluctuations old July went off the board at noon with a gain of 16 points and new up 27 points. New crop futures declined late in the day, ending off 6 to 9 points.

A contraction in the open interest in July prior to expiration left few buying or selling orders in the ring. Issuance of 15 transferrable notices brought out early liquidation, which was soon absorbed.

Trade dragged along listlessly after noon as the market refused to pay much attention to the unfavorable weekly Government survey. The market seemed to have discounted poor crop progress and preferred to sit on the sidelines pending developments at Chicago and abroad.

Sugar Futures

New York, July 17 (AP).—The domestic sugar futures contract made a good showing today despite a 3-point cut in spot raw sugar.

Final prices in the domestic list were unchanged to 3 points lower on sales of 12,700 tons. Replacement demand for distant deliveries steadied the market.

The world list ignored trade reports of United Kingdom buying of Javan sugar and declined after starting steadiness. Final prices were ½ to 1 point lower on sales of 2,100 tons; September, .94*; March, 1.01*.

Spots were lowered on sale of 7,500 tons of Philippines due Monday at 2.65 cents a pound. Refined remained at 4.50 cents in local territory.

British Defense Order Hits 'Free' Sterling Market in U. S.

By the Associated Press

London, July 17.—The free market price for the British pound in New York will virtually vanish as a result of a British order in council issued today under defense regulations.

Effective tomorrow quotations there will be brought to the official London level. The Bank of England buys sterling at $4.02½, sells at $4.03½. The free rate in New York is currently around $3.76.

In effect free sterling will no longer be convertible into dollars since no free sterling will be credited to American accounts except from other American accounts.

Exact status of free sterling under the ruling, however, which was made available to the New York market over the week-end, was not entirely clear. At the moment New York banks are cabling here for clarification.

When the market in the United States is cleared of present holdings of free sterling, all business relations between the United States and Britain are expected to be conducted at the official rate.

The order amending defense regulations said the steps were "taken in pursuance of existing policy of restricting use of free sterling as an international medium of exchange.

"In particular, arrangements have been made with the cooperation of American banks for a system of 'registered accounts' through which payments in sterling can be made from residents in the sterling area to residents in the United States for transfer at the official rate and vice versa.

"Sterling from these accounts will be available to pay for exports from the United Kingdom to the United States. Similar arrangements have been made with Switzerland."

Owing to the close cooperation between the British and Canadian equalization funds, the new regulations will not have a direct official effect on Canada. Such Canadian trade as is worked through United States middlemen may be concerned to some extent.

The definition of public relations, the job which your correspondent is supposed to be doing for WJSV, is quite simple. It's the business of knowing what's going on around you, picking out things you think people would like to hear about and then just telling them. Elementary, what?

Well, this is just a mournful little aside to report apologetically that news from WJSV has been neither very public nor well related this week. As I recall it, through a fog dimly, members of WJSV's personnel mentioned have been chiefly John Charles Daly and my modest self.

The reason: Daly and I have been appointed by the network to carry on and bring the news from the Capital to the Nation during Al Warner's absence in Chicago. And it isn't as if the bringing of the news came at convenient times for such fun-loving Rover boy types. No, the first broadcast must go out at 7 a. m. There's usually one an hour later. There are conferences and things to be covered till another comes up at 2. Then another at 5, still another at 9:30.

It makes for a somewhat restricted scope on personal items.

Today's Radio Highlights

For the latest plans of the Democratic National Convention consult your favorite radio station! Unpredictable as are renominations and ovations, the network plans are necessarily sketchy, although several definite time assignments have been made.

11:15 a. m., WMAL and WRC—N. B. C.'s observers, including Baukhage, H. V. Kaltenborn, Earl Godwin and Raymond Clapper, gather 'round the Round Table to review what's already hapepned in Chicago.

11:15 a. m., WOL—The United States Navy Band, Charles Benter, leader, broadcasts its concert from the Washington Navy Yard. Mrs. Arthur M. Gillett, a Washington composer, is represented on the program with her "Farewell," while the other numbers include Goldman's "Cuckoo;" "If I Were King," Adam; "Legionnairs on Parade," Olivadoti; "Uncle Sammy," Holzmann, and "The Glory of the Marines." Grable.

1 p. m., WMAL—Margaret Culkin Banning's series "It Looks From Here" means "from Chicago" this afternoon.

1:15, WMAL—Tired unto the death of what you are eating these days? Richard Kent, the Traveling Cook, invariably has some fresh ideas on what to try for variety. This one is from Bagdad, Koosa-Mehshey, stuffed squash to you.

6:30, WRC—Here's a chance for those who are ever ready to watch radio broadcasts. Bob Crosby and his gang will air the Camel Caravan twice tonight from the stage of the Capitol Theater. First at 6:30 for the Eastern network and then again (same program) at 9 for the West Coast.

6:30, WJSV—Just in case you haven't had enough of Chicago already (and who was that muttering over there, anyway?) Vox Pop takes its tireless microphone to the delegate-dripping city.

6:30, WOL—Shannon Allen, of the U. S. Department of the Interior, discusses the subject of our natural resources and their conservation as the Conservation Reporter.

9, WMAL—The Blue network definitely promises to pick up the convention proceedings from the floor at this time, reserving the right, of course, to start things going earlier if the occasion warrants.

9:30, WOL—Mutual promises a variety show from the Windy City, with "talent from the Democrats who are attending the convention." Wana bet this show won't go on?

Contract Bridge

It wouldn't be difficult for Hoyle's star pupils to figure out the correct play of today's hand. It was first reported by a New England player. South is the declarer at four spades. What tricks must be lost and upon what does the game depend? From here on, it's your fight.

At first it may seem that the contract hinges upon the diamond finesse, as it appears that declarer must lose a club, a heart and two diamonds, the queen and a low diamond. But there is another plan if the spot cards are closely examined.

Though West may be leading from the club ace, it is unlikely that he would lead from ace-jack or ace-queen and declarer bases his plan on this assumption.

He plays the six of clubs from dummy on the first trick; East plays the jack, and his best move is to return a heart. Declarer wins with the ace, and leads a low trump to dummy's jack. He leads the king of clubs, planning to discard if East plays low, but East naturally covers and South trumps. He reenters dummy with a low spade to dummy's queen and plays the club ten, discarding a diamond when East follows with a small club. West wins with the club queen and leads a diamond, but declarer puts up dummy's ace and cashes the established eight of clubs to discard his last losing diamond. Only a low heart now goes to the defense, declarer winning ten tricks and losing three—two clubs and a heart.

Children to Use Park Buildings

President Signs Bill to Benefit U. S. Workers' Families

By Edward Ryan

Children of Government employes yesterday received one boost, and the promise of a second.

Their first boost came in a bill signed by President Roosevelt, to permit converting federal Buildings in the national parks into classrooms for the children of park employes during the school year.

Main benefit of the legislation, Interior officials said, will go to the families of park rangers, superintendents and other employes in some of the larger Western parks. These employes are year-around residents of the parks, and in some areas their homes are miles from the nearest school.

Meeting on Camp

The legislation gives the Secretary of the Interior authority to designate park building facilities for use as schools where they are needed.

Meanwhile a committee of the Welfare and Recreation Association planned a meeting tomorrow to study a proposal for converting Hi-Catoctin Camp near Thurmont, Md., into a free summer resort for the children of low-paid Government workers employed in Washington.

The mountain camp was opened last year for the use of Federal employes and their families, and during its first season the camp remained about 75 per cent vacant. This attendance record rolled up a $4,000 deficit for the Welfare and Recreation Association, which operated the project.

$10,000 Outlay Studied

Now the committee of associated trustees is considering raising the $4,000 deficit up to a $10,000 direct outlay for child welfare, and opening the camp next summer with a program that would insure full use of all its facilities.

The plan would provide free vacations for children between 8 and 13, whose parents are active or retired Government employes receiving an annual income of $2,000 or less.

The children would be chosen for camp vacations by the welfare organizations operating in separate Government agencies.

Jobs—The Civil Service Commission has opened new competitive exams for these Government positions:

For example:

Ranger Semingsen and a CCC crew were fighting a fire on Chipmunk Creek. All of a sudden, according to memo No. 1, "they were accosted by a deer, running frantically about, blinded and exhausted." If a deer couldn't find the way out, they decided, neither could they. They waited until the smoke cleared, then escaped. The deer died.

Naturalist Thompson and 200 awe-stricken tourists saw six geysers and a hot pool going full blast during one walk. The geysers names were Sponge, Lion, Sawmill, Old Faithful, Grand and Daisy.

Hot River is 9 feet wide, 2 feet deep and 145 feet long, and it carries away 100 tons of lime in solution every 24 hours. It used to be called Boiling River.

HER SIDE OF STORY—Mrs. W. A. Fletcher demonstrates how she has to sweep up behind the garbage men

Housewives Litter Streets? 'We Help Clean 'Em,' Says One

Indignant Matron Points to Surreatistic Material in Her Alley to Prove Point; Police Hunt Pair Who Take Cans, Leave Trash

Washington's white wings yesterday received a figurative black eye from a housewife as she stood sweeping their leftovers from the pavement of her rear alley.

She was Mrs. W. A. Fletcher, wife of a Chestnut Farm Dairy route supervisor, who lives in a two-story tan brick house at 5115 Fifth street northwest. She pointed to the alley. It contained material for a surrealistic still-life—an empty, half-crushed beer can, a crumpled cigarette package, a coffee ground or two, a slice of orange peel and half of a delicate brown eggshell.

It was not only the litter that provoked Mrs. Fletcher. That's an old story. Tuesday, William A. Xanten, Washington's city refuse supervisor, complained about the street littering of District housewives after his white-wings had cleaned up. He had said:

"Yet by noon you'd never think a white-wing had been there. Housewives have swept new litter into the street."

Every Wednesday, she said, the white-wings go through her alley. Behind them follow the garbage truck. And, invariably, they are followed by a brigade of housewives, picking up the droppings of the truck.

"Housewife!" Mrs. Fletcher exclaimed. "We've become alley-wives."

"Attention Scout 132 . . . Arrest a colored trash man in the 1800 block of Thirteenth street northwest. He is taking the containers and leaving the trash.

Such was the message broadcast over the police radio. The dispatcher explained he had a complaint from citizens. Scout 132 responded and reported, "Gone on arrival."

Hollywood Full Of Subversion, Dies Is Told

Witness Lists 42 Film Figures Who Aid Communists

By the Associated Press

Beamont, Tex., July 17.—Hollywood's film colony, the Dies Committee was told today, has been a prime source of Communist Party revenue and recruiting.

A list of 42 of the moving picture industry's foremost figures—actors and actresses, writers, producers and directors—was submitted by John L. Leech, of Portland, Oreg., who identified himself as an ousted member of the West Coast Communist organization.

Sixty per cent of those listed, he testified, were active party members. Others assertedly contributed funds and discussed Communist propaganda in "special study groups."

Chairman Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, of the House committee investigating un-American activities, is conducting the hearing as a one-man sub-committee. The hearing is closed to the public but testimony is made public through committee spokesmen.

Names Not Revealed

Committee sources said they wished to keep secret names of the Hollywood celebrities listed by Leech, although the names were placed in the committee's official record.

The Leech list, it was learned, included the names of movie queens and leading men, comedians and ace cameramen whose salaries run into four figures.

Most of his testimony concerned activities of the years 1935 and 1936. Leech said he was expelled from the party in 1937.

Film personalities donated $1,200 to $1,500 each month to Communist coffers, Leech testified, these amounts not including special contributions and assessments.

Chairman Dies recessed the hearing until tomorrow after hearing another witness testify that a confederation of Spanish-speaking persons in Texas and other parts of the country was being formed to further Mexican interests in the United States.

Director Led Groups

Leech's testimony included an assertion that the Los Angeles section of the Communist Party oversubscribed a $17,000 special assessment. Most of the money came from Hollywood, he said.

The home of a prominent director, Leech said, was a regular meeting place for a study group. At one meeting, where efforts were made to raise $10,000, Earl Browder, Communist Presidential candidate, was present.

In the summer of 1935 a screen and radio comedian came to Leech's office and told him the party had transferred him from New York to Hollywood, Leech asserted. The comedian displayed a membership book in which he was listed under the pseudonym of "J. Rand."

Mrs. Roosevelt Displays Stoicism

New York, July 17 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was asked today whether she would like to spend another four years in the White House. She laughed and said: "When you have lived as long as I have, what happens to you in the next four years is not so important—you do what you have to do."

Mrs. J. D. Darnall Found Dead

Mrs. J. David Darnall, 75, a resident of Takoma Park for the past 20 years, was found dead in her gas-filled home, at 411 Tulip avenue, by her husband and daughter, Mrs. Edna Shacklett.

The Takoma Park Rescue Squad attempted resuscitation for more than an hour and a half. Neighbors said Mrs. Darnall had been ill for several days.

Liquor Board to Recommend Changes in Law for District

Dealers and Distributors Will Meet Saturday on Proposed Regulations; Lodge Indicates Revision Is Planned

Chairman Thomas E. Lodge, of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, yesterday indicated the board would recommend some changes in the liquor regulations at the conclusion of scheduled hearings.

Responding to the demands made Tuesday by Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, for action on recommendations made by the Eberharter subcommittee, Lodge said he had called representatives of local retail liquor dealers and distributors to meet Saturday at 10 a. m. with the members of the board. Proposed regulations, as they affect control of liquor advertising and prices, will be discussed.

Milton S. Kronheim, local wholesale dealer and an official of the District of Columbia Retail Liquor Dealers Association, will meet the board Saturday.

"During my more than two weeks' absence from the city numerous suggestions have been made relating to the Eberharter report and the means of carrying out its recommendations.

"I have today invited representatives of two groups in the industry to meet with us Saturday morning, July 20, at 10 a. m. to discuss their suggestions and receive their concrete proposals. All others are cordially invited. Subsequently, I will ask leading citizens and all interested parties to discuss the proposed regulations and to offer suggestions.

"The Eberharter committee report is designed primarily to improve conditions in the interest of the general public. It is intended also to correct some conditions found troublesome to those in the industry.

"Naturally, I am personally and officially anxious to expedite action to accomplish those ends. In consequence, I will do all in my power to submit to the Commissioners proposed regulations at the earliest possible date."
